

TENNYSON

AYLMER'S FIELD

WITH

INTRODUCTION AND NOTES

BY

W. T. WEBB M.A

PROFFSSOR OF ENGLISH LITERATURE, PRISIDENCY COLLUE, CALCUTTA

Sri Kumud Nath Dutta

14C, KALI KUMAR BANERJEE LANE TALA, CALCUTTA-2.

Condon

MACMILLAN AND CO., Limited

NEW YORK: THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

7899

All rights reserved

First Edition 1891. Reprinted 1895, 1899.

PREFATORY NOTE.

FOR part of the General Introduction to this volume I am indebted to my colleague, Mr. F. J. Rowe; whom, together with Mr. K. Deighton, I wish to thank for several valuable suggestions embodied in the Notes.

The Notes enclosed in brackets and signed H. T. have been sent by the Hon. Hallam Tennysen, to whom the proofs of this edition have been submitted.

W. T. W.

CONTENTS.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION,							ix
INTRODUCTION TO	AYLMI	er's	FIELD,		. ••		• ,	•	XXX
AYLMER'S FIELD,			•			•	-	.•	1
Nomes.				• .	•	•		•	28

GENERAL INTRODUCTION.

BY T J ROWE, M A, AND W T WEBB, M A, PROFESSORS OF ENGLISH LITTRACERS INVIDEN & COLUMN, CALOUTTA

Biography I Tennyson the in in 1 His sense of law shown in his conceptions of (a) Nature (!) Preedom? (c) I ove, (!) Seeming 2 His mobility of thought, and his religion 3 His simplicity of emotion II Tennyson the Post 1 As Representative of his A<sub>f</sub> 2 As Artist (a) His observation (!) His schellethip, (c) His approximeness (d) His simple, (e) His approximent of the commonplace (f) His repetition and assonance (g) His harmony of theythm, (h) His melody of diction. His dramatic works. Conclusion

ALITRED, LORD TENNYSON, was boin on August 6th, Biography 1809, at Somersby, a village in Lincolnshire, of which his father was rector. The wolds surrounding his home, the fen some miles away, with its "level waste" and "trenched waters," and the sex on the Lincolnshire coast, with "league long rollers" and "table-shore," are pictured again and again in his poems

When he was seven years old he was sent to the Louth Grammar School, and returning home after a few years there, was educated with his elder brother Charles by his father. Charles and Alfred Tennyson, while yet youths, published in 1827 a small volume of poetry entitled Poems by Two Brothers. In 1828 the two brothers entered Trinity College, Cambridge, where Alfred gained the University Chancellor's gold medal for a poem on Tinuuctoo, and where he formed an intimate friendship with Arthur Henry Hallam (son of the historian), whose memory he has immortalised in In Memoriam. Among his other · Cambridge friends may be mentioned R. C. Trench (afterwards Archbishop of Dublin), Monckton Milnes (afterwards Lord Houghton), J. M. Kemble (the Anglo-Saxon scholar), Merivale (the historian, afterwards Dean of Ely), James Spedding, and W. H. Brookfield. In 1830 Tennyson published his Poems, chiefly Lyrical, among which are to be found some sixty pieces that are preserved in the present issues of his works. In 1832 Poems by Alfred Tennyson appeared, and then, after an interval of ten years, two more volumes, also with the title Poems. His reputation as a poet was now established, though his greatest works were yet to come. Chief among these are The Princess (1847). In Membriam (1850), Mand (1855), Idylls of the King (1859-1885), and Enoch Arden (1864). In 1875 Tennyson published his first drama, Queen Mary, followed by Harold (1877), The Cup (acted in 1881), The Promise of May . (1882), The Falcon and Becket (1884), and The Furesters (1892). On the death of Wordsworth in 1850, Tennyson succeeded him as Poet Laureate. he was gazetted Baron of Aldworth and Earringford, his two seats in Sussex and in the Isle of Wight. He died on October 6th, 1892, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, near the grave of Browning.

Remyson Man

I. Of all modern English poets Tennyson has most readers; and the phief elements of the powerful charm which he exercises over the hearts and minds of all English speaking peoples will be evident on even a brief survey of the character of his mind as revealed in his works, and of the matter and the form of his verse. At the basis of all Tennyson's teaching, indeed of all his work, is Tennyson the man. The mould of a poet's mind is the mould in which his thoughts and even his_ modes of expression must run, and the works of a poet cannot be fully understood unless we understand the soct himself.

1. Conspicuous among the main currents of thought (1) His sans and feeling that flow through the body of his writings is his perception of the movement of Law throughout the worlds of sense and of spirit: he recognises therein a settled scheme of great purposes underlying a universal order and gradually developing to completion.

• (a) Illustrations of this recognition of pervading Law shown in may be found in his conception of Nature, and in his (a) Nature; treatment of human action and of natural scenery. Nature, which to Shelley was a spirit of Love, and to Wordsworth a living and speaking presence of Thought, is to Tennyson a process of Law including both. in the midst of his mourning over the seeming waste involved in the early death of his friend, he can write

> I cuise not nature, no, nor death; For nothing is that errs from law.

in In Memoriam

In all the workings of Nature he traces the evolution of the great designs of God;

> Ther God, which ever lives and loves, One God, one law, one element. And one far of divine event To which the whole creation moves,

In The Higher Pantheism, a similar thought is found.

God is law, say the wise; O soul, and let us rejoice, For if He thunder by law, the thunder is yet His voice.

Freedom:

(b) Allied to this faith that the universe is "roll'd round by one fixt law" is the poet's sympathy with disciplined order in the various spheres of human action. In his teaching on social and political questions, his ideal is a majestic order, a gradual and regular development, without rest indeed, but, above all, without haste. His ideal Freedom is "sober-suited"; it is such a Freedom as has been evolved by the gradual growth of English institutions, a Freedom which slowly broadens down From precedent to precedent.

He has small faith in sudden outbursts of revolutionary fervour; he thinks that the "red fool fury of the Seine" (alluding to the excesses of the French revolutionaries), the "flashing heats" of the "frantic city," retard man's progress towards real liberty: they "but fire to blast the hopes of men." If liberty is to be a solide and lasting possession, it must be gained by patient years of working and waiting, not by "expecting all things in an hour"; for with him "raw Haste" is but "halfsister to Delay." So also Tonnyson's love for his own country is regulated and philosophic: he has given us a few patriotic martial lyrics that stir the living blood "like a trumpet call," as The Charge of the Light Brigade and The Revenge, but in the main his patriotism is founded on admiration for the great "storied past" of England. Though in youth he triumphs in "the Vision of the world and all the wonder that would be," yet neither in youth nor in age is he himself without some distrust of the new democratic forces which may end in "working their own doom":—

Step by step we gain'd a freedom known to Europe, known to all.

Step by step we rose to greatness - thro' the tonguesters we may fall.

- (c) Again, in his conception of the passion of Love, (c) Love; and in his portraiture of Womanhood, the same spirit of reverence and self-control animates Tennyson's verse. Love, in Tennyson, is a pure unselfish passion. Even the guilty love of Lancelot and Guinevere is described from a spiritual standpoint, in its evil effects rather than in any sensuous detail. His highest ideal of love is found in the pure passion of wedded life: true love can exist only under the sanction of Duty and of Reverence for womanhood and one's higher self; and such love is the source of man's loftiest ideas, and the inspiration of his noblest deeds. Examples of this treatment may be seen in The Miller's Daughter, Enoch Arden, The Gardener's Daughter, and Guinevere, and it underlies the moral lessons inculcated in The Princess.
- (d) Lastly, Tennyson's appreciation of Order is illus-(d) Scenery trated in his treatment of natural scenery. It is true that he sometimes gives us scenes of savage grandeur, as in the monstrous ledges slope and spill

Their thousand wreaths of dangling water-smoke, but he oftener describes still English landscapes, the "haunts of ancient peace," with "plaited alleys" and "terrace lawn," "long, gray fields," "traces of pasture sunny-warm," and all the ordered quiet of rufal life.

(2) His nobiliis of thought, and his religion.

2 A second great element of Tennyson's character is its noble tone. This is present in every poem he has ever written. His verse, is informed with the very spirit of Honour, of Duty, and of Reverence for all that is pure and true. This is the spirit that animates the tamous passage in Enone

Self reverence, aclf knowledge, self control,
These three alone lead life to sovereign power
Yet not for power (power of herself
Would come uncalled for), but to live by law,
Acting the law we live by without fear,
And, because right is right, to follow right
Were wisdom in the sorm of consequence.

It is illustrated on its negative side in The Palace of Art, it breathes through his noble Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, and it pervades and inspires his picture of King Arthur in the Idylls of the King

Tennyson's religious faith is sufficiently indicated in his writings. At the root of his poetry (as Mr. Stopford Brooke has remarked) he "the ever working immanence of God in man, the brotherhood of the human race, and its evolution into perfect love and righteousness; the continuance of each man's personal consciousness in the life to be; the vitality of the present—man alive and Nature alive, and alive with the life of God."

(i) His simpli-

3. Another main characteristic of Tennyson is simplicity. The emotions that he appeals to are generally easy to understand and common to all. He avoids the subtle analysis of character, and the painting of complex motives or of the wild excess of passions. The emoral laws which he so strongly-suphelds are those primary sanctions upon which avorage English society is founded.

A certain Puritan simplicity and a scholarly restraint pervade the mass of his work.

It is on these foundations of Order, Nobility, and Simplicity that Tennyson's character is built.

II. Turning now to the matter or substance of his A. Tennyso poems, we note, first, that the two chief factors of Tennyson's popularity are that he is a representative English poet, and that he is a consummate Artist.

1. In the great sphere's of human thought—in reli- (1) As Representative of gion, in morals, in social life-his poems reflect the his Age, complex tendencies of his age and his surroundings. Not, it may be, the most advanced ideas, not the latest speculation, not the transient contentions of the hour; but the broad results of culture and experience upon the poet's English contemporaries. The ground of Tennyson's claim to be considered a representative of his age is seen in the lines of thought pursued in some of those more important poems which deal with the great problems and paramount interests of his times. The poems cover a period of fifty years, and must be considered in the order of their publication. Locksley Hall, published in 1842, the speaker, after giving vent to his own tale of passion and regret, becomes the mouthpiece of the young hopes and aspirations of the Liberalism of the early Victorian era, while in Lockstey Hall Sixty Years After, the doubts and distrast felt by the Conservatism of our own times find dramatic utterance. The Princess deals with a question of lasting interest to society, and one which has of late years risen into more conspicuous importance, the changing position and proper sphere of Woman. In The Palace of Art the poet describes and condemns a spirit of æstheticism whose sole religion is the worship of Beauty and Knowledge for their own sakes, and which ignores human responsibility and obligations to one's fellow men: while in St. Simeon Stylites, the poet equally condemns the (vils of a selfcentred religious asceticism which despises the active duties of daily life The Vision of Sin is a picture of the perversion of nature and of the final despair which attend the pursuit of sensual pleasure. The Tho Forces illustrates the introspective self analysis with which the age discusses the fundamental problem of existence, finding all solutions vain except those dictated by the simplest voices of the conscience and the heart. The poet's great work, In Mymoram, is the history of a tender human soul contionted with the stern, relentless order of the Universe and the seeming waste and cruelty of Death. The poem traces the progress of sorrow from the Valley of Death, over-shadowed by the darkness of unspeakable loss, through the regions of philosophic doubt and meditation to the serene heights of resignation and shope. where Faith and Love can triumph over Death in the confident hope of a life beyond, and over Doubt by the realization

That all, as in some piece of art, is toil cooperant to an end

Mand is dated at the conclusion of that long period of peace which ended at the Crimean War, when the commercial prosperity of England had reached a height unknown before, and when "Britain's sole god" was the milionaire. The poem gives a dramatic rendering of the revolt of a cultured mind against the hypocrisy and corruptions of a society degraded by the worship of Mammon, though the hero inherits a vein of insanity and speaks too bitterly. The teaching of Tennyson's longest, and in many respects greatest poem—the spreading mischief of a moral taint—is discussed at length in the Introduction to The Coming of Arthur and the Passing of Arthur. Here too Tennyson expresses one of the deepest convictions of his time.

2. But if Tennyson's popularity is based upon a (2) As Artist. correspondence between his own reverence for Law and the deepest foundations of English character, it is based no less upon his delicate power as an Artist. Among the elements of this power may be mentioned (a) a minute observation of Nature, which furnishes him with a store of poetic description and imagery;
(b) a scholarly appreciation of all that is most picturesque in the literature of the past; (c) an exquisite precision in the use of words and phrases; (d) the picturesqueness and the aptness of his similes; (e) an avoidance of the commonplace; (f) his use of repetition and of assonance; (g) the expressive harmonies of his rhythm, and (h) the subtle melody of his diction.

(a) For minute observation and vivid painting of the (a) His obdetails of natural scenery Tennyson is without a rival. We feel that he has seen all that he describes. This may be illustrated by a few examples of his treestudies:

hair

In gloss and line the chestnut, when the shell Divides three-fold to show the fruit within (The Brook)

Macmillan and Co.

those eyes

Darker than darkest pansies, and that hair More black than ashbuds in the front of March (The Gardener's Daughter)

With blasts that blow the poplar white

(In Memorian 9

A million emoralds break from the ruby-budded lime
(Maud)

From roots like some black coil of carven snakes.
Clutch'd at the gray of (The Last Tournament)

We may also notice the exactness of the epithets in "perky larches," "dry-tongu'd laurels," "ligh-cloou'd grigs," "pillar'd dusk of sounding sycamores," "laburnums, dropping-wells of fire"

Equally exact are his descriptions of scientific phenomena.

Before the little ducts began
To feed thy bones with lime, and ian
Their course till thou wert also man
(The Two Voices)

Still, as while Saturn whirls, his steadfast shade Sleeps on his luminous ring

(The Palace of Art).

This accurate realization of natural or scientific facts is often of service in furnishing apt illustrations of moral truths or of emotions of the minde:

Break, thou deep vase of chilling tears That grief has shaken into frost

(14 Memoriam)

Their thousand wreaths of dangling water smoke
That like a broken furpose waste in air
(The Princess)

Prayer, from a living source within the will, And beating up through all the bitter world, Like fountains of sweet water in the sea

(Enoch Arden).

(b) Allusions to the Classics of more than one land (b) His scho may be found in Tennyson. Lines and expressions would seem sometimes to be suggested by the Greek or Latin poets, and in these the translation is generally so happy a rendering of the original as to give an added grace to what was already beautiful. Illustrations of this characteristic will be found among the Notes at the end of this volume. There is occasionally a reconditioness about these allusions which may puzzle the general reader. For example, in the lines

> And over those ethereal eyes The bar of Michael Angelo (In Memoriant)

where the reference is to the projection of the frontal bone above the eye brows noticeable in the portraits. of Michael Angelo and of Arthur Hallam, a peculiarity of shape said to indicate strength of character and mental power Similarly in

> Proxy-wedded with a bootless calf (The Princess)

we find an allusion to an old ceremony of marriage by proxy, where an ambassador or agent representing the absent bridegroom, after taking off his long ridingboot, placed his leg in the bridal bed.

(c) We may next note Tempson's unequalled power (c) His express of finding single words to give at a flash, as it were, an exact picture. What he has written of Virgil's art is equally true of his own, which offers us

All the charm of all the Muses often flowering in a lonely word:

This power of fitting the word to the thought may be seen in the following examples: "creamy spray"; "lily maid"; "the ripple washing in the reeds" and "the wild water lapping on the crag"; "the dying ebb that faintly lipp'd the flat red granite"; "as the flery Sixius bickers into red and emerald"; "women blowed with health and wind and rain."

(d) His similes; (d) Mr. G. C. Macaulay (Introduction to Gareth and Lynette) has remarked upon the picturesqueness, the elaborate apthess, and the individual and personal character of Tennyson's similes. Of their picturesque aptness two examples will be sufficient here:

The great brand
Made lightnings in the splendour of the moon,
And flashing round and round, and whirl'd in an arch,
Shot like a streamer of the northern morn,
Seen where the moving isles of winter shock
By night, with noises of the northern sea

(Morte d'Arthur)

Dust are our frames; and, gilded dust, our pride Looks only for a moment whole and sound; Like that long-buried body of the king, • Found lying with his urns and ornaments, Which at a touch of light, an air of heaven, Slipt into ashes, and was found no more (Aylmer's Field).

As regards their individual and personal character, Tennyson's similes in many cases "do not so much appeal to common experience, as bring before us some special thing or some peculiar aspect of nature, which the poet has vividly present to his own mind, while to the reader perhaps the picture suggested may be quite unfamiliar." As examples we may take the following:

So now that shadow of mischance appear'd No graver than as when some little cloud Cuts of the fiery highway of the sun, And isles a light in the offing • (Enoch Arden).

So. in Geraint and Enid, when the bandit falls transfixed by Geraint's lance, Tennyson writes:

As he that tells the tale . Saw once a great piece of a promontory,
That had a sapling growing on it, slide
From the long shore-cliff's windy walls to the beach,
And there lie still, and yet the sapling grew.

A remarkable instance of this individuality occurs in Gareth and Lymette:

Gareth lookt and read— In letters like to those the vexillary Hath left crag-carven o'er the streaming Gelt:—

the Gelt being a small stream in Cumberland, not named in any of the ordinary gazetteers or atlases; and the reference is to an inscription on a lime-stone rock near this stream, carved by the Second Legion of Augustus, stationed there in A.D. 207.

(e) Possessing such a faculty of appropriate expres (e) His avoidsion, the poet naturally avoids the commonplace: he commonplace; not only rigidly excludes all otiose epithets and stopgap phrases, but often, where other writers would use some familiar, well-worn word, he selects one less known but equally true and expressive. He has a distinct fordness for good old Saxon words and expressions, and has helped to rescue many of these from undeserved oblivion. Thus, for the "skinflint" of comman parlance he substitutes (in Walking to the Mail) the "flayflint" of Ray's Proverbs, in place of "blindman's buff" is found the older "hoodman blind" (In Memoriam), for "village and cowshed" he write "thorpe and byre" (The Vacton); while in The Brook the French "cricket" appears as the Saxon "grig." Other examples might be quoted, e.g., lurduse, rathe, plash, brewis, thrall'd, boles, quitch, reckling, roky, yaffinyale. Occasionally he prefers a word of his own cointge, as tonguester, selfless. This tendency to avoid the commonplace is noticeable not only in separate words, but in the rendering of ideas, a poetic dress being given to prosaic details by a kind of stately circumlocution: thus in The Princess the hero's northern birthplace is indicated by his telling "us that "on my cradle shone the Northern star"; and, in the same poem, the blue smoke rising from household chimneys is described by "azure pillars of the hearth "-an expression which Mr. P. M. Wallace, in his edition of The Princess, aptly calls "almost reverent"; icebergs are "moving isles of winter"; while to picture the hour before the planet Venus had sunk into the sea, the noet writes:

> Before the crimson-circled star Had fall'n into her father's grave.

(f) One of the leading characteristics of Tennyson's monand style is the repetition of a word (often in a modified form) in the same or sometimes in a slightly different sense. We have, for instance:

Whereat the novice crying, with clasp'd hands, Shame on her own garrulity garrulously ((l'uinevere)

and in the same poem,

The maiden passion for a maid;

to which we may add:

For ever climbing up the climbing wave

(The Lotos-Eater)

Mouldering with the dull earth's mouldering sod (The Palace of Art).

Assonance—the repetition not of a word but of a sound—is also a favourite device with Tennyson for giving kind of epigrammatic force to a statement, as in

Even to tipmost lance and topmost helm

(The Last Tournament)

Thy Paynim bard
Had such a mastery of his mystery
That he could harp his wife up out of hell
(Ib)

Then with that friendly-fiendly smile of his (Harold).

(g) Lastly, if we examine the metrical characteristics (g) His har of Tennyson's poetry, we observe that the sense of thythm; majestic order and gradual development pervading the substance of his poems is not more conspicuous than is the sense of music which governs the style of his versification. While less powerful than Milton's at its best, Tennyson's blank verse always remains at a high level of excellence, and its simple grandeur of style and expression is peculiarly his own. It is in his lyrical poems. however, that his mastery of metre and rhythm best shows itself. He knows all the secrets of harmonious measures and melodious diction; he has re-cast and polished his earlier poems with such minute and scrupulous care that he has at length attained, a metrical form more perfect than has been reached by any other poet. Several illustrations of the delicacy of his sense of metre are pointed out in the Notes. A few more examples may be here quoted to show how frequently in his verse the sound echoes the sense. This is seen in his Representative Rhythms. Thus:

(1) The first syllable or half-foot of a line of blank verse is often accented and cut off from the rest of the line by a pause, to indicate some sudden emphatic action or startling sight or sound, breaking the flow of the narrative—an effect often employed by Homer:

his arms

Clark'd: and the sound was good to Gareth's car (Gareth and Lynette)

Charm'd, till Sir Kay, the seneschal, would come (Ib.)

Shock, that a man far-off might well perceive (Lancelot and Elaine)

Flash'd, and he call'd, 'I fight upon thy side'
(Pelleas and Etarre)

Back, as a hand that pushes thro' the leaf (Ib.)

Fall, as the crest of some slow-arching wave Drops flat (The Last Tournament).

Occasionally the whole first foot is thus cut off:

made his horse

Caraçole: then bowed his flomage, bluntly saying

Who stood a moment, ere his horse was brought, Glorying: and in the stream beneath him shone (Gareth and Lynctte).

(2) Action rapidly repeated is represented by an unusual number of unaccented syllables in one line. Thus we almost hear the huddling flow of waters in such lines as

Myriads of rivulets hurrying thro, the lawn

(The Princess)

Of some precipitous rivulet to the sea

(Enoch Arden).

The rapid warble of song-birds sounds through

Melody on branch and melody in mid-air

(Gårcth and Lynette) and in the same Idyll, the quick beat of a horse's hoof is echoed in

The sound of many a heavily galloping hoof.

(3) Contrast with the above the majestic effect produced by the sustained rhythm and the bread vower sounds in

By the long wash of Australasian seas

(The Brook)

The league-long roller thundering on the reef (Enoch Arden).

(4) Variations from the usual iambic regularity of blank verse, attained by placing the accent on the first instead of on the second half-foot, are introduced, often to represent intermittent action, as in

Dówn the lóng tówer-stáirs, hésitáting

(Lancelot and Elaine).

(A) His molody

(h) Tennyson's sense of music is equally conspicuous in the melody of his diction. The mere sound of his words and phrases lingers in the brain, apart from any meaning, as the echoes of a musical cadence linger along a vaulted roof. This is in the main due to his selection of melodious vowels and liquid consonants, and also to his skilful use of alliteration. Examples are everywhere:

The mean of doves in immemorial elms,
And murmuring of innumerable bees

(The Princes)

The Justre of the Jong convolvuluses
(Enoch Arden)

The long low dune and lazy plunging sea (The Last Tournament)

Breast-high in that bright line of bracken stood (Pelleas and Elarre)

All-flay the wind breathes low with mellower tone Through every hollow cave and alley lone (The Lotes Eaters).

Contrast with the liquid sounds in the above the representative effect produced by the short, sharp vowels and the guttural and dental sounds in

And on the spike that split the mother's heart Spitting the child

(The Coming of Arthur)

The blade flew Splintering in six, and clink upon the stones (Bulin and Balan)

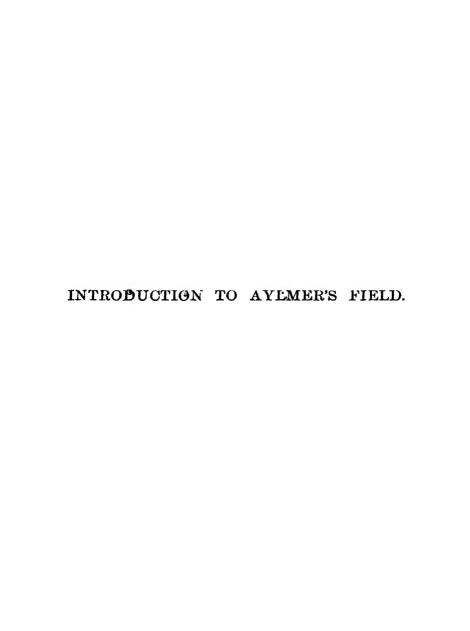

Then sputtering thro' the hedge of spunter'd teeth,
Yet strangers to the tongue, and with blant stump
Pitch-blacken'd sawing the air
(The Last Tournament).

In double words initial alliteration is conspicuous.— In caker-beaten, flesh fall'n, glomny-gladed, lady-laden, mockmeck, point-painted, non notten, storm-strengthen'd, tonguetorn, work wan. We also find slowly mellowing, hollower-Villowing, ercr-veering, heavy-shotted hammock-shroud. Olten, as Mr. G. C. Macaulay has noticed, Tennyson's alliteration is so delicate that we "only feel that it is there without perceiving where it is," and it is then, perhaps, due to no conscious effort of the poet, but is as natural as the includy of a bird. In no English poet, perhaps only in Homer and Virgil, 15 this kinship of poetry and music so evident as in Tennyson.

Tennyson's three Listorical dramas form (as Mr. His Diamatte Henry Van Dyke has pointed out) a picture of the Making of England, the three periods of action being, it would seem, chosen with the design of touching the most critical points of the long struggle. Thus in Harold we see "the close of that fierce triangular duel between the Saxons, the Danes, and the Normans, which resulted in the Norman conquest and the binding of England, still Saxon at heart, to the civilization of the Continent." In Becket we have "the conflict between the church and the crown, between the ecclesiastical and the royal prerogatives, which shook England to the centre for many years, and out of which her present constitution has grown" In Queen Mary, when the triumph of church and people had left undecided what type of religion was to prevail, is pictured the struggle between the Papacy and the Reformation for the possession of England. All three plays are full of deep research, vivid character-painting, and intensity of feeling, and contain many magnificent situations. George Eliot has expressed her opinion that "Tennyson's plays run Shakspere's close," and Robert Browning used to point out the scene of the oath over the bones of the Saints of Normandy, in Harold, as a marvellously actable scene: while Mr. J. . R. Green, the historian. has told us that "all his researches into the annals of the twelfth century had not given him st vivid a conception of the character of Henry II. and his court as was embodied in Tennyson's Becket" It should at the same time be remembered that (as the poet himself avows) this drama is "not intended in its present form to meet the exigencies of the modern theatre," a criticism which may be applied with more or less force to the whole trilogy. Becket has been adapted for the stage by Mr. Irving, and performed with great success; and The Cup and The Falcon were each played during a London season to full houses. Queen Mary, The Promise of May, and The Foresters have also been acted.

Such is Tennyson as man and as artist. His poetry, with its clearness of conception and noble simplicity of expression, its discernment of the beautiful and its power of revealing and shaping it with mingled strength and harmony, has become an integral part of the literature of the world, and so long as purity and loftiness of thought expressed in perfect form have power to charm, will remain a possession for ever.

INTRODUCTION TO AYLMER'S FIELD

Date Locality, Aulmer's Fuld was first, published in 1864. Aylmer-ston, a village in Norfolk, has been said to be the scene of the poem; but the description of the locality as "a land of hops" (l. 31) shows that it must be laid in some more southern English county, such as Kent or Sussex. The title -Aylmer's Field—points to the desolation that overwholmed the ancestral abode of the Aylmer family, when

"The great Hall was wholly broken down,
And the broad woodland parcell'd into farms," and thus what was once Aylmer's Hall came to be known as Aylmer's Fuld.

Story of the Poem.

The story of the poem is briefly this:—Sir Aylmer Aylmer is one of the English landed gentry, proud of his birth and station; his wife, once a well known beauty, is a mere shadow of himself. They have one lovely daughter, Edith, sole heiress to their wealth and name, a benefactor of the poor and favourite of all who know her. Averill is rector of the parish, and Leolin is his brother. Leolin and Edith grow up together, and their childish intimacy ripens into love in their maturer years. Edith is enlightened as to the state of her own feelings towards Leolin by a "tlash of semi-jealousy," on his part, of an Indian kinsman who comes and makes her presents, among them being a dagger of beautiful work manship. This dagget she gives to Leolin Then Sir Aylmer's eyes are suddenly opened to the love making between the two, Leolin is violently driven from his dors, and Edith is kept close at home. The indig nant Leolin goes off to his law studies, determined to make a name for himself, and meanwhile he and Edith carry on a clandestine correspondence with each other. This is discovered and stopped, neither of them anderstanding flow. Edith is more closely shut up than ever; she loses her health, is caught by a passing fever, and dies with Leolin's name upon her lips. Leolin hears her call him in his slear as it seems, and answers her, trembling with excitement. The next day comes the dreadful news, and Loolin stabs himself with the dagger that Edith had given him On a following Sunday morning, Averill is asked to preach Edith's funeral sermon. He takes for his text, "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate," and denounces In terrible words of doom the pride and self-seeking of the Aylmer parents. Lady Aylmer faints and is carried out of the church, and the heart-stricken Sir Aylmer staggers out behind her, followed by the frowns of the assembled villagers. Lady Aylmer dies in a month, and Sii Aylmer becomes imbecile, and two years later is laid beside his wife and daughter. Then the great Hall is pulled down, and its site is turned into a haunt for the mole and the hedgehog.

In point of style, the main characteristic of Aylmer's Style. Field is its vigour of thought and expression. While remarkable for passages of great loveliness and pathos, it is through its power rather than its beauty that, as a whole, it appeals to the imagination of the reader. We do not find here the studied simplicity of language and the repose of feeling that mark its companion poem, Enoch Arden, published originally in the same volume. But in its stern moral strength Aylmer's Field is an equalled among the poems of Tennyson.

Scope and Aim.

Aylmer's Field is "2 protest against the tyranny of the pride of birth and wealth over-love." It denotes one of the chief among "The social lies that warp us from the living truth."

The pride depicted by the poet is of that ignofile type which leans in self-complacent egotism upon the achievements of others, without any sense that the inheritance of a noble name should be an incentive to noble deeds werthy of a great ancestry. It is the pride that is content to "Fall back upon a name, rest, rot in that, Not keep it noble, make it nobler."

For this false pride of birth and the Mammon-wership that so often accompanies it Tennyson cherishes a noble scorn and abhorrence, and he has branded them both in several other of his poems. For example, in Lady Clara Vere de Vere, the pride of the heroine produces a tragical result somewhat similar to that of Aylmer's Field, in the suicide of "young Lawrence," the humble suitor who is scornfully rejected by this "daughter of a hundred earls." In Maud again it is the pride of the brother that brings about the catastrophe. Maud, like Edith, is faithful to her lover; but, like her, she cannot extricate herself from the selfish worldliness of her surroundings; and she too is parted from him and dies. In Aulmer's Field. Lcolin is driven to despair and madness that ends in spicicle; in Maud, the mind of the hero also gives way berleath the strain of acute suffering, but he recovers and finds a solace in noble action. In Locksley Hall it is the pride of wealth that steps between the two youthful lovers with its blighting influence, though with consequences less tragic than in Aylmer's Field, where, as in Hamlet, the curtain falls upon the deaths of all the chief personages in the story except one, and only Averill is deft, like Horatio,

<sup>1</sup> A Study of Tennyson. By E. C. Tainsh.

"In this harsh world wo draw his breath in pain."

The subject of Wordsworth's Hart-leap Well has some Compared to affinity to that of Aylmer's Field In either poem the Well. events are told or supposed to be told to the writer by an old man familiar with the traditions of the place where they occurred. Both stories turn upon wanton. acts of cruelty, though in Hart-leap Well it is a dumb animal that is the victim, instead of human beings, as in Aylmer's Field. In Hart-leap Well, as in Aylmer's Field, the scene of man's pride and inhumanity is laid waste; "the spot is curst"; and Sir Walter's great lodge, like Sir Aylmer's mansion, is wholly broken down and vanishes like "a forgotten dream."

"Now there is neither grass nor pleasant shade; The sun on drearier hollow never shone."

In Wordsworth's poem, however, we are not left, as in Aylmer's Field, to contemplate a prospect of unredeemed ruin and desolations There is a healing as well as a retributive power in Nature; it is true that

> "The pleasure-house is dust.—behind, before, This is no common waste, no common gloon; But Nature, in due course of time, once more Shall here put on her beauty and her bloom."

The Sermon.

A leading feature in Aylme's Field is a verill's sermon, comprising, as it does, nearly one-fifth of the entire poem. It has been described as "a mosaic of Bible language, most curiously wrought and fused into one living whole by the heat of an intense sorrow. In its prowhet-like earnestness and terrible, concentrated power, no less than in its subtly intermingled pathos and scorn, it stands unparalleled in literature. Critics have raised objections to so excellent a clergymap as Averill being represented as seizing the first opportunity of preaching publicly against two of his parishioners after their daughter's death, and have asked, "Why smite those afresh whom God had smitten so terribly already?" But such criticisms as these are wide of the mark. The poem is explicitly an idealised delineation of coarse and cruel wrong-doing followed by swift and appropriate punish-The demands of poetical justice are satisfied to the full. Borne along by the high moral truth of the whole picture, the reader does not stop to inquire into minor details or questions of antecedent probabilities. The pathetic description of the events that come before and lead up to it, prepares his mind for the preacher's storm-blast of indignant reproach. There is no sense of incongruity; the sermon seems a natural and almost.

The Poetry of Tenny on. By Henry Van Dyke.

inevitable outcome of what precedes; and the canons of taste and of art are alike satisfied.

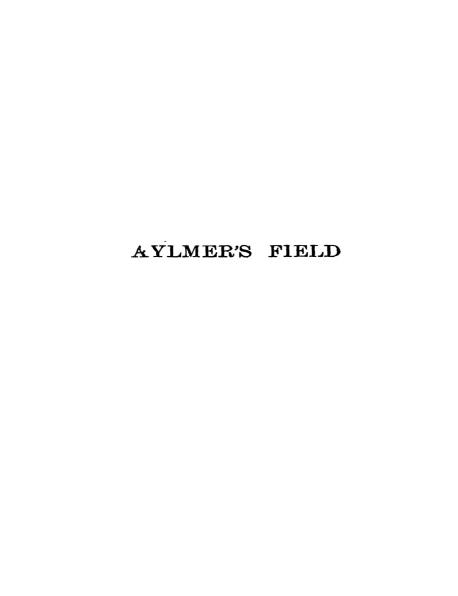

This sermon may be briefly paraphrased as follows: -- Paraphrased. "The worst of all the calamities that mankind has suffered under are the various forms of idolatry which put Self in the place of God. The old Baalworshippers degraded their object of worship to their own level, but, with the coming of Christianity, better things were expected. But no! though actual idolworship is cone, man still worships his own selfish desires and aims in the shape of wealth and rank, living in luxury and careless of his soul's welfare and of the teachings of the religion that he professes You then, the modern self-worshipper, who ought to have known better, shall be regarded by the humbly-born but mighty Jesus as a worse idolater than the old Baal-worshipper, for you by your evil precept and example destroy the souls instead of the bodies of your children. Some possibly may escape the taint, as did the subject of my discourse, a beautiful maiden, the joy and blessing of our homes. No cottage was too humble for her to visit, no wretchedness too low for her to succour. Her hand was ever ready in works of charity and kindness, and, herself a disciple of the loving Christ, she soothed your religious doubts and sweetly healed your quarrels. Leolin was her constant companion, and might eventually have become her huswand. He has died by his own hand;—a death of shame, the guilt and the disgrace of which belong not to him but to those who drove him to it. Good reason then have I, thus doubly bereaved, to say, My house is left unto me desolate.'

"You too, my parishioners, may well use the same words, for your loss is irreparable. But you, the unhappy parents, who have caused all this calamity,—would that you, like Jerusalem of old, had better understood your own true interests and ours! As Jerusalem had her prophets, whom she stoned, so you had your child to lead you up to higher things, and you have killed her. Jerusalem, unrepentant, was desolated by sword and fire; and you, who would not listen to the warning example of your child, have brought a kke doom upon yourselves. This loss has darkened my own life and hardened my feelings; pray for me, my parishioners, for Leolin, alas, is past your prayers.

"When I first heard of these events, I, who thought myself so meek-spirited, was fain intlignantly to denounce the crime that has made these two its victims. when I see what is now going on in France, the Revolution with its Reign of Terror and ghastly, wholesale executions, I feel that this is not a time to add fuel to the angry passions of men. No less do I feel that this was not a fitting time for these Aylmen to indulge their pride. My wish, then, is that this great sin of theirs may remain concealed from the public eye, though it will, no doubt, be talked of in this neighbourhood. But I would ask you rather to pray for and pity those who have carried out their own aims and broken a union which might have perpetuated their family; -- who, thinking by charse methods to plan their daughter's, welfare, have planned her death and brought misery upon their old age. Their punishment in this life is surely great enough without that of the life to come. Stript as they are of our respect and affection, with a stranger to succeed to their property, bereft of all hope of posterity, their home desolated, bitter indeed must be their feelings as they hear me, their old friend, like them and by them bereaved, cry to them, as Christ did to the worldly, self-deluding Pharisees, 'Behold, your house is left unto you desolate!'"

It may be remarked, in conclusion, that the Greek Grook Tragto *tragic element is strongly represented in Aylmer's Field. Like the haughty Edipus, of Sophocles's drama, unged on by overmastering Destiny, Sir Avlmer, "by his own stale devil spurr'd," goes blindly on, working out his own ruin for himself. He is the Greek Hybristes, the violent, overbearing type of humanity. again, like the formal Cleon of the same dramatist, bent or promoting his son's best interests by "breaking the bond" between him and the noble Antigone. Sir Aylmer sets himself about "contriving his dear daughter's good," and ends in ignorantly devising her death. The irony of it all is thoroughly Greek in its texture, though the Greek notion of an inexorable Fate or Necessity is replaced in the modern poem by a vivid representation of the power of a "besetting siu," indulged and cherished, to goad a man on to his own destruction and that of others. Here, as ever, "sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

AYLMER'S FIELD.

1793.

Dust are our frames; and, gilded dust, our pride Looks only for a moment whole and sound; lake that long-buried body of the king, Found lying with his urns and ornaments, who Which at a touch of light, an air of heaven, Slipt into ashes, and was found no more.

Here is a story which in rougher shape Came from a grizzled cripple, whom I saw Sunning himself in a waste field alone— Old, and a mine of memories—who had served Long since, a bygone Rector of the place, And been himself a part of what he told.

10

SIR AYLMER AYLMER, that almighty man, The county God—in whose capacious hall, Hung with a hundred shields, the family tree Sprang from the midriff of a prostrate king—Whose blazing wyvern weathercock'd the spire,

Stood from his walls and wing'd his entry-gates
And swang besides on many a windy sign—
Whose eyes from under a pyramidal head
Saw from his windows nothing save his own—
What levelier of his own had he than her,
His only child, his Edith, whom he leved
As heires, and not heir regretfully?
But 'he that marries her marries her name'
This fiat somewhat soothed himself and wife,
His wife a faded beauty of the Baths,
Lusipid as the Queen upon a card;
Her all of thought and bearing hardly more
Than his own shadow in a sickly sun.

A land of hops and poppy-mingled corns.

Little about it stirring save a brook.

A sleepy land, where under the same wheel
The same old rut would deepen year by year;
Where almost all the village had one name;
Where Aylmer followed Aylmer at the Hall
And Averill Averill at the Rectory
Thrice over; so that Rectory and Hall,
Bound in an immemorial intimacy,
Were open to each other; tho' to dream

That Love could bind them closer well had made
The hoar hair of the Baronet bristle up
With horror, worse than had he heard his priest
Preach an inverted scripture, sons of men

And might not Averill, had he will'd it so, Somewhere beneath his own low range of roofs. Have also set his many-shielded tree?

Daughters of God; so sleepy was the land.

20

30-

70

80

There was an Aylmer-Averill marriage once. When the red rose was redder than itself, 50 And York's white rose as red as Lancaster's, With wounded peace which each had prick'd to death. 'Not proven' Averill said, or laughingly 'Some other race of Averills'-prov'n or no, What cared he? what, if other or the same? He lean'd not on his fathers but himself. But Leolin, his brother, living oft With Averill, and a year or two before Call'd to the bar, but ever call'd away By one low voice to one dear neighbourhood, 60 Would often, in his walks with Edith, claim A distant kinship to the gracious blood That shook the heart of Edith hearing him.

Sanguine, he was: a but less vivid hue Than of that islet in the chestnut-bloom Flamed, in his, cheek; and cager eyes, that still Took joyful note of all things joyful, beam'd, Beneath a manelike mass of rolling gold, Their best and brightest, when they dwelt on hers, Edith, whose pensive beauty, perfect else, But subject to the season or the mood, Shone like a mystic star between the less And greater glory varying to and fro, We know not wherefore; bounteously made. And yet so finely, that a troublous touch Thinn'd, or would seem to thin her in a day. A joyous to dilate, as toward the light. And these had been together from the first. Leolin's first nurseewas, five years after, hers: So much the boy foreran; but when his date Doubled her own, for want of playmates, he

(Since Averill was a decad and a half His elder, and their parents underground) Had tost his ball and flown his kite, and roll'd His hoop to pleasure Edith, with her dipt Against the rush of the an in the pione swing, Made blossom ball or daisy chain, arranged Her garden, sow'd her name and kept it given In living letters, told her fairy tales, Show'd her the fury footings on the grass, The little dells of cowslip, fury palms, The petty marcstail forest, fany pines, Or from the tiny pitted triget blew , very What look'd a flight of fany arrows aun'd All at one mark, all bitting snake believes For Edith and himself or else be forged, But that was later, boyish histories Of battle, bold adventure, dungeon, wreck, Flights, terrors, sudden rescues, and true love Crown'd after tilal, al etches jude and taint, But where a passion yet unborn perhaps Lay hidden as the music of the moon Sleeps in the plant eggs of the nightingale And thus together, save for college times Or Temple eaten terms, a couple, fan As ever painter painted, poet sang, Or Heaven in lavish bounty moulded, grew And more and more, the maiden weman-grown, He wasted hours with Averill, there, when first The tented wanter field was broken up Into that phalanx of the summer spears That soon should wear the garland, there again When burn and bine were gather'd, lastly there At Christmas, ever welcome at the Halk On whose dull sameness his full tide of youth Broke with a phosphorescence charming even

90

100

My lady; and the Baronet yet had laid No bar between them: dull and self-involved, Tall and erect, but bending from his height With half-allowing smiles for all the world, 120 And mighty courteous in the main-his pride Lay deeper than to wear it as his ring-He, like an Aylmer in his Aylmerism, Would care lo more for Leolin's walking with her Than for his old Newfoundland's, when they ran To loose him at the stables, for he rose Wwofooted at the limit of his chain, Roaring to make a third: and how should Love, Whom the cross-lightnings of four chance-met eyes Flash into fiery life from nothing, follow 130 Such dear familiarities of dawn? (2) Seldom, but when he does, Master of all.

So these young hearts not knowing that they loved,
Not she at least, nor conscious of a bar
Between them, nor by plight or broken ring
Bound, but an immemorial intimacy,
Wander'd at will, and oft accompanied
By Averill: his, a brother's love, that hung
With wings of brooding shelter o'er her peace,
Might have been other, save for Leolin's—

Who knows? but so they wander'd, hour by hour
Cather'd the blossom that rebloom'd, and drank
The magic cup that fill'd itself anew.

A whisper half reveal'd her to herself. For out beyond her lodges, where the brook Yocal, with here and there a silence, ran

By sallowy rims, arose the labourers' homes, A frequent haunt of Edith, on low knolls That dimpling died into each other, huts At random scatter'd, each a nest in bloom. Her art, her hand, her counsel all had wrought 'About them: here was one that, summer-blanch'd, Was parcel-bearded with the traveller's-ioy In Autumn, parcel ivy-clad; and here The warm-blue breathings of a hidden hearth Broke from a bower of vine and honey suckle One look'd all rosetree, and another wore A close-set robe of jasmine sown with stars: . This had a rosy sea of gillyflowers About it; this, a milky-way on earth, Like visions in the Northern dreamer's heavens, A lily-avenue climbing to the doors; One, almost to the martin-haunted eases A summer burial deep in hollyhocks; Each, its own charm; and Edith's everywhere; And Edish ever visitant with him. He but less loved than Edith, of her poor: For she-so lowly levely and so loving, "Queenly responsive when the loyal hand Rose from the clay it work'd in as she past, Not sowing hedgerow texts and passing by, · Nor dealing goodly counsel from a height That makes the lowest hate it, but a voice Of comfort and an open hand of help, A splendid presence flattering the poor roofs Revered as theirs, but kindlier than themselves To ailing wife or wailing infancy Or old bedridden palsy,—was adored; He, loved for her and for himself. Having the warmth and muscle of the heart, A childly way with children, and a laugh

160

170

190

200

210

Ringing like proven golden coinage true.

Were no false passport to that easy realm,

Where once with Leolin at her side the girl,

Nursing a child, and turning to the warmth

The tender pink five-beaded baby-soles,

Heard the good mother softly whisper 'Bless,

God bless 'em: marriages are made in Heaven.'

A flash of semi-jealousy clear'd it to her. My lady's Indian kinsman unannounced A With half a score of swarthy faces came. His own, tho' keen and bold and soldierly Sear'd by the close ecliptic was not fair; Fairer his talk, a tongue that ruled the hour, Tho' seeming boastful: so when first he dash'd Into the chronicle of a deedful day, Sir Aylmer half forgot his lazy smile Of patron 'Good! my lady's kinsman! good!' My lady with her fingers interlock'd, And rotatory thumbs on silken knees. Call'd all her vital spirits into each ear To listen: unawares they flitted off, Busying themselves about the flowerage That stood from out a stiff brocade in which, The meteor of a splendid season, she, Once with this kinsman, ah so long ago, Stept thro' the stately minuet of those days: But Edith's eager fancy hurried with him Snatch'd thro' the perilous passes of his life: Till Leolin ever watchful of her eye, Hated him with a momentary hate. Wife-hunting, as the rumour ran, was he: I know not, for he spoke not, only shower'd His oriental gifts on everyone

And most on Edith: like a storm he came, And shook the house, and like 'a storm he went.

Among the gifts he left her (possibly lie flow'd and ebb'd uncertain, to return When others had been tested) there was one A dagger, in rich sheath with jewels on it Sprinkled about in gold that branch'd itself Fine as ice-ferns on January panes Made by a breath. I know not whence at first, Nor of what race, the work; but as be told The story, storning a hill-fort of thieves He got it; for their captain after fight, His comrades having fought their last below, Was climbing up the valley; at whom he shot: Down from the beetling crag to which the clung Tumbled the tawny rascal at his feet, This dagger with him, which when now admired By Edith whom his pleasure was to please, At once the costly Sahib yielded to her.

And Leolin, coming after he was gone,
Tost over all her presents petulantly:
And when she show'd the wealthy scabbard, saying
'Look what a lovely piece of workmanship!'
Shight was his answer 'Well—I care not for it:'
Then playing with the blade he prick'd his hand,
'A gracious gift to give a lady, this!'
'But would it be more gracious' ask'd the girl
'Were I to give this gift of his to one That is no lady?' 'Gracious? No' said he.
'Me?—but I cared not for it. O pardon me,

220

230

I seem to be ungraciousness itself:
'Take it' she added sweetly, 'tho' his gift;
For I am more ungracious ev'n than you,
I care not for it either; 'and he said
'Why then I love it:' but Sir Aylmer past,
And neither loved nor liked the thing he heard.

250

The next day came a neighbour. Blues and reds They tak'd of: blues were sure of it, he thought: Then of the latest fox-where started-kill'd 'In such a bottom: 'Peter had the brush, 3 My Peter, first:' and did Sir Aylmer know That great pock-pitten fellow had been caught ! Then made his pleasure echo, hand to hand, And rolling as it were the substance of it A Between his palms a moment up and down-'The birds were warm, the birds were warm upon him; We have him now: ' and had Sir Aylmer heard-Nav. but he must—the land was ringing of it-This blacksmith border-marriage-one they knew-Raw from the nursery—who could trust a child? That cursed France with her egalities! And did Sir Aylmer (deferentially With nearing chair and lower'd accent) think-For people talk'd-that it was wholly wise To let that handsome fellow Averill walk So freely with his daughter? people talk'd-270 The boy might get a notion into him; The girl might be entangled ere she knew. Sir Aylmer Aylmer slowly stiffening spoke: 'The girl and boy, Sir, know their differences!' 'Good,' said his friend, 'but watch!' and he, 'Enough, More than enough, Sir! I can guard my own.' They parted, and Sir Aylmer Aylmer watch'd.

Pale, for on her the chunders of the house Had fallen first, was Edith that same night; Pale as the Jephtha's daughter, a rough piece Of early rigid colour, under which ' Withdrawing by the counter door to that Which Leolin open'd, she cast back upon him A piteous glance, and vanish'd. He, as one Caught in a burst of unexpected storm, And pelted with outrageous epithets, 😽 ( Turning beheld the Powers of the House On either side the hearth, indignant; her, Cooling her false cheek with a featherfan, Him, glaring, by his own stale devil spurr'd. 290 And, like a beast hard-ridden, breathing hard. 'Ungenerous, dishonourable, base, Presumptuous! trusted as he was with her The sole succeeder to their wealth, their lands, The last remaining pillar of their house, The one transmitter of their ancient name, Their child.' 'Our child!' 'Our heiress!' 'Ours!' for still. Like echoes from beyond a hollow, came

Like echoes from beyond a hollow, came
Her sicklier iteration. Last he said,
'Boy, mark me! for your fortunes are to make.
I swear you shall not make them out of mine.
Now inasmuch as you have practised on her,
Perplext her, made her half forget herself,
Swerve from her duty to herself and us—
Things in an Aylmer deem'd impossible,
Far as we track ourselves—I say that this—
Else I withdraw favour and countenance
From you and yours for ever—shall you do.
Sir, when you see her—but you shall not see her—
No, you shall write, and not to her, but me:
And you shall say that having spoken with me.

·300

340

And after look'd into yourself, you find That you meant nothing-as indeed you know That you meant nothing. Such a match as this! Impossible, prodigious !' .These were words, As meted by his measure of himself, Arguing boundless forbearance after which. And Leolin's horror-stricken answer, 'I So foul a traitor to myself and her, Never oh never,' for about as long 320 As the wind-hover hangs in balance, paused Sir Aylmer reddening from the storm within, Then broke all bonds of courtesy, and crying Boy, should I find you by my doors again, . My men shall lash you from them like a dog; Hence with a sudden execration drove The footstool from before him, and arose : So, stammering 'scoundiel' out of teeth that ground As in a dreadful dream, while Leolm still Retreated half aghast, the fierce old mafi 330 Follow'd, and under his own lintel stood Storming with lifted hands, a hoary face Meet for the reverence of the hearth, but now, Beneath a pale and unimpassion'd moon, Vext with unworthy madness, and deform'd.

Slowly and conscious of the rageful eye
That watch'd him, till he heard the ponderous door
Close, crashing with long echoes thro' the land,
Went Leolin; then, his passions all in flood
And masters of his motion, furnously
Down thro' the bright lawns to his brother's ran,
And foam'd away his heart at Averill's ear:
Whom Averill solaced as he might, amazed.
The man was his, had been his father's, friend:

He must have seen, hisiself had seen it long; He must have known, himself had known: besides He never yet had set his daughter forth Here in the woman-markets of the west, Where our Caucasians let themselves be sold. Some one, he thought, had slander'd Leolin to him. . 350 'Brother, for I have loved you more as son Than brother, let me tell you: I myself-What is their pretty saying? jilted, is it? Jilted I was: I say it for your peace. Pain'd, and, as bearing in myself the shame The woman should have borne, humiliated, I lived for years a stunted sunless life; Till after our good parents past away Watching your growth, I seem'd again to grow. Leolin, I almost sin in envying you: 360 The very whitest lamb in all my fold Loves you; I know her: the worst thought she has Is whiter even than her pretty hand: She must prove true: for, brother, where two fight The strongest wins, and truth and love are strength, And you are happye: let her parents be.'

But Leolin cried out the more upon them—
Insolent, brainless, heartless! heiress, wealth,
Their wealth, their heiress! wealth enough was theirs
For twenty matches. Were he lord of this,
Why twenty boys and girls should marry on it,
And forty blest ones bless him, and himself
Be wealthy still, ay wealthier. He believed
This filthy marriage-hindering Manmon made
The harlot of the cities: nature crost
Was mother of the foul adulteries
That saturate soul with body. Name, too! name.

Their ancient name ! they might be proud; its worth Was being Edith's Ah how pale she had look'd Dailing, to-night! they must have rated her 380 Beyond all tolerance. These old pheasant-lords, These partridge-breeders of a thousand years. Who had mildew'd in their thousands, doing nothing Since Egbert-why, the greater their disgrace! Fall back upon a name 'rest, not in that ' Not keep it hoble, make it noble? fools, With such a vantage-ground for nobleness! He had known a man, a quintessence of man, The life of all -who madly loved-and he, Thwarted by one of these old father-fools, 390 Had rioted his life out, and made an end. He would not do it! her sweet face and faith Held him from that but he had powers, he knew it. Back would be to his studies, make a name, Name, fortune too, the world should ring of him To shame these mouldy Aylmers in their graves Chancellor, or what is greatest would be be--'O brother, I am grieved to learn your grief-Give me my fling, and let me say my say."

At which, like one that sees his own excess, And easily forgives it as his own, He laugh'd; and then was mute; but presently Wept like a storm: and honest Averill seeing How low his brother's mood had fallen, fetch'd His richest beeswing from a binn reserved For banquets, praised the waning red, and told The vintage—when this Aylmer came of age—Then drank and past it; till at length the two, Tho' Leolin flamed and fell again, agreed
That inucle allowance must be made for men.

400

After an angry dream this kindlier glow Faded with morning, but his purpose held.

Yet once by night again the lovers met, A perilous meeting under the tall pines That darken'd all the northward of her Hall. Him, to her meek and modest bosom prest In agony, she promised that no force, Persuasion, no, nor death could alter her: He, passionately hopefuller, would go, Labour for his own Edith, and return In such a sunlight of prosperity He should not be rejected. Write to me! They loved me, and because I love their child They hate me: there is war between us, dear, Which breaks all bonds but ours; we must remain Sacred to one another.' So they talk'd, Poor children, for their comfort: the wind blew The rain of heaven, and their own bitter tears, Tears, and the careless rain of heaven, mixt Upon their faces, as they kiss'd each other In darkness, and above them roar'd the pine.

So Leolin went; the as we task ourselves
To learn a language known but smatteringly
In phrases here and there at random, toil'd
Mastering the lawless science of our law,
That codeless myriad of precedent,
That wilderness of single instances,
Thro' which a few, by wit or fortune led,
May beat a pathway out to wealth and fame.
The jests, that that'd about the pleader's room,

420

430

Lightning of the hour, the pun, the scurrilous tale,-Old scandals buried now seven decads deep In other scandals that have lived and died, And left the living scandal that shall die-Were dead to him already; bent as he was To make disproof of scorn, and strong in hopes, And prodigal of all brain-labour he, Charier of sleep, and wide, and exercise, ·Except when for a breathing while at eve, Some niggard fraction of an hour, he ran 150 Beside the river-bank: and then indeed 'Harder the times were, and the hands of power Were bloodier, and the according hearts of men *Seem'd harder too; but the soft river-breeze, Which fann'd the gardens of that rival rose Yet fragrant in a hear remembering His former talks with Edith, on him breathed Far purelier in his rushings to and fro, After his books, to flush his blood with air, Then to his books again. My lady's cousin, 460 Half-sickening of his pension'd afternoon, Drove in upon the student once or twice, Ran a Malayan amuck against the times, Had golden hopes for France and all mankind, Answer'd all queries touching those at home With a heaved shoulder and a saucy smile, And fain had haled him out into the world, And aired him there: his nearer friend would say 'Screw not the chord too sharply lest it snap.' Then left alone he pluck'd her dagger forth 470 From where his worldless heart had kept it warm, Kissing his vows upon it like a knight. And wrinkled benchers often talk'd of him Approvingly, and prophesied his rise: For heart, I think, help'd head: her letters too.

Tho' far between, and coming fitfully
Like broken music, written as she found
Or made occasion, being strictly watch'd,
Charm'd him thro' every labyrinth till he saw
An end, a hope, a light breaking upon him.

480

But they that cast her spirit into flesh, Her worldly-wise begetters, plagued themselves To sell her, those good parents, for her good. Whatever eldest-born of rank or wealth Might lie within their compass, him they lured Into their net made pleasant by the baits Of gold and beauty, wooing hin to woo. So month by month the noise about their doors, And distant blaze of those dull banquets, made The nightly wirer of their innocent hare, Falter before he took it. All in vain. Sullen, defiant, pitying, wroth, return'd Leolin's rejected rivals from their suit So often, that the folly taking wings Slipt o'er those lazy limits down the wind With rumour, and became in other fields A mockery to the yeomen over ale, And laughter to their lords: but those at home, As hunters round a hunted creature draw The cordon close and closer toward the death, Narrow'd her goings out and comings in; Forbadeher first the house of Averill, Then closed her access to the wealthier farms, Last from her own home-circle of the poor They barr'd her: yet she bore it: yet her cheek Kept colour: wondrous! but, O mystery! . What amulet drew her down to that old oak, So old, that twenty years before, a part

490

Falling had let appear the brand of John-Once grovelike, each huge arm a tree, but now 510 The broken base of a black tower, a cave Of touchwood, with a single flourishing spray. There the manorial lord too curiously . Raking in that millennial touchwood-dust Found for himself a bitter treasure trove; Burst his own wyvern on the seal, and read Writhing a letter from his child, for which Came at the moment Leolin's emissary, A A crippled lad, and coming turn'd to fly, But scared with threats of jail and halter gave 520 To him that fluster'd his poor parish wits The letter which he brought, and swore besides To play their go-between as heretofore Nor let them know themselves betray'd; and then, Soul-stricken at their kindness to him, went Hating his own lean heart and miserables

Thenceforward oft from out a despot dream The father panting woke, and oft, as dawn Aroused the black republic on his elms, Sweeping the frothfly from the fescue brush'd Thro' the dim meadow toward his treasure-trove, Seized it, took home, and to my lady, -who made A downward crescent of her minion mouth, Listless in all despondence,—read; and tore, As if the living passion symbol'd there Were living nerves to feel the rent; and burnt, Now chafing at his own great self defied, Now striking on huge stumbling-blocks of scorn In babyisms, and dear diffinutives Scatter'd all over the vocabulary

540

Of such a love as like a childen child, After much wailing, hush'd itself at last Hopeless of answer: then the Averill wrote And badehim with good heart sustain himself-All would be well -the lover heeded not, But passionately restless came and went, And rustling once at night about the place. There by a keeper shot at, slightly hurt, Raging return'd: nor was it well for her Kept to the garden now, and grove of pines, Watch'd even there; and one was act to watch The watcher, and Sir Aylmer watch's them all, Yet bitterer from his readings: once indeed, Waim'd with his wines, or taking pride in her, She look'd so sweet, he kiss'd her tenderly Not knowing what possess'd him. that one kiss Was Leolin's one strong rival upon earth; Seconded, for my lady follow'd suit, Seem'd hope's returning rose; and then ensued A Martin's summer of his faded love, Or ordeal by kindness; after this He seldom crost his child without a sneer; The mother flow'd in shallower acrimonies: Never-one kindly smile, one kindly word: So that the gentle creature shut from all Her charitable use, and face to face With twenty months of silence, slowly lost Nor greatly cared to lose, her hold on life. Last, some low fever ranging round to spy The weakness of a people or, a house, Like flies that haunt a wound, or deer, or men, Or almost all that is, hurting the hurt-Save Christ as we believe him-found the girl And flung her down upon a couch of fire. Where careless of the household faces near,

550

560

And crying upon the name of Leolin, She, and with her the race of Aylmer, past.

Star to star vibrates light: may soul to soul Strike thro' a finer element of her own? So, -- from afar, -- touch as at once? or why 580 That night, that moment, when she named his name. Did the keen shriek 'Yes love, yes, Edith, yes,' Shrill, tell the comrade of his chambers woke, And came upon him half-arisen from sleep, With, a weird bright eye, sweating and trembling, His hair as it were crackling into flames, His body half flung forward in pursuit, And his long arms stretch'd as to grasp a flyer: Nor knew he wherefore he had made the cry; And being much befool'd and idioted 590. By the rough amity of the other, sank As into sleep again. The second day, My lady's Indian kinsman rushing in, A breaker of the bitter news from home, Found a dead man, a letter edged with death Beside him, and the dagger which himself Gave Edith, redden'd with no bandit's blood: 'From Edith' was engraven on the blade.

Then Averill went and gazed upon his death.

And when he came again, his flock believed—
Beholding how the years which are not Time's
Had blasted him—that many thousand days
Were clipt by horror from his term of life.

Yet the sad mother, for the second death
Scarce touch'd her thro' that nearness of the first
And being used to find her pastor texts.

Sent to the harrow'd brother, praying him To speak before the people of her child, And fixt the Sabbath. Darkly that day rose Autumn's mock sunshine of the faded woods √ 610 Was all the life of it; for hard on these, A breathless burthen of low-folded heavens Stifled and chill'd at once; but every roof Sent out a listener: many too had known Edith among the hamlets round, and since The parents' harshuess and the hapless loves And double death were widely murmur'd, left Their own gray tower, or plain-faced tabernacle, To hear him; all in mourning these, and those With blots of it about them, ribbon, glove Or kerchief; while the church,—one night, except For greenish glimmerings thro' the lancets,-made Still paler the pale head of him, who tower'd Above them, with his hopes in either grave.

62Ò

Long o'er his bent brows linger'd Averill, His face magnetic to the hand from which Livid he pluck'd it forth, and labour'd thro' His brief prayer prelude, gave the verse 'Behold, Your house is left unto you desolate!' But lapsed into so long a pause again As half amazed half frighted all his flock: Then from his height and loneliness of grief Bore down in flood, and dash'd his angry heart Against the desolations of the world.

630

Never since our bad earth became one sea, Which rolling o'er the palaces of the proud,

And all but those who knew the living God-Eight that were left to make a purer world-When since had flood, fire, earthquake, thunder, wrought Such waste and havock as the idolatries, 640 Which from the low light of mortality, Access Shot up their shadows to the Heaven of Heavens, And worshipt their own darkness in the Highest? Gash thyself, priest, and honour thy brute Bail, And to thy worst self sacrifice thyself, For with thy worst self hast thou clothed thy God Then came a Lord in no wise like to Baal. The babe shall lead the lion. Surely now The wilderness shall blossom as the rose, "Crown thyself, worm, and worship thine own fusts — 650 No coarse and blockish God of acreage A Stands at thy gate for thee to grovel to-Thy God is far diffused in noble groves And princely halls, and farms, and flowing lawns, And heaps of living gold that daily grow, And title-scrolls and gorgeous heraldries. In such a shape dost thou behold thy God. Thou wilt not gash thy flesh for him; for thine Fares richly, in fine linen, not a hair Ruffled upon the scarfskin, even while 660 The deathless ruler of thy dying house Is wounded to the death that cannot die; And the thou numberest with the followers Of One who cried, "Leave all and follow me" Thee therefore with His light about thy feet, Thee with His message ringing in thine ears, Thee shall thy brother man, the Lord from Heaven, Born of a village girl, carpenter's son, Wonderful, Prince of peace, the Mighty God, Count the more base idolater of the two; 670 Crueller: as not passing thro' the fire

Bodies, but souls-thy children's-thro' the smoke, The blight of low desires—darkening thine own To thine own likeness; or if one of these, Thy better born unhappily from thee, Should, as by miracle, grow straight and fair-Friends, I was bid to speak of such a one By those who most have cause to sorrow for her-Fairer than Rachel by the palmy well, 680 Fairer than Ruth among the fields of corn, Fair as the Angel that said "Hail!" she seem'd, Who entering fill'd the house with sudden light. For so mine own was brighten'd: where indeed The roof so lowly but that beam of Heaven Dawn'd sometime thro' the doorway? whose the babe Too ragged to be fondled on her lap, Warm'd at her bosom? The poor child of shame The common care whom no one cared for, leapt To greet her, wasting his forgotten heart, As with the mother he had never known, 690 In gambols; for her fresh and innocent eyes Had such a star of morning in their blue, That all neglected places of the field Broke into nature's music when they saw her. Low was her voice, but won mysterious way Thro' the seal'd ear to which a louder one Was all but silence-free of alms her hand-The hand that robed your cottage-walls with flowers Has often toil'd to clothe your little ones; How often placed upon the sick man's brow 700 Cool'd it, or laid his feverous pillow smooth! Had you one sorrow and she shared it not? One burthen and she would not lighten it? One spiritual doubt she did not soothe? Or when some heat of difference sparkled out, How sweetly would she glide between your wraths,

And steal you from each other! for she walk'd Wearing the light yoke of that Lord of love, Who still'd the rolling wave of Galilee!" And one-of him I was not bid to speak-710 Was always with her, whom you also knew. Him too you loved, for he was worthy love. And these had been together from the first; They might have been together till the last. Friends, this frail bark of ours, when sorely tried, May wreck itself without the pilot's guilt, Without the captain's knowledge: hope with me. Whose shame is that, if he went hence with shame? Nor mine the fault, if losing both of these I cry to vacant chairs and widow'd walls, 720 "My house is left unto me desolate."

While thus he spoke, his hearers went; but some, Sons of the glebe, with other frowns than those That kuit themselves for summer shadow, scowl'd At their great lord. He, when it seem'd he saw No pale sheet-lightnings from afar, but fork'd Of the near storm, and aiming at his head, Sat anger-charm'd from sorrow, soldier-like Erect: but when the preacher's cadence flow'd Softening thro' all the gentle attributes Of his lost child, the wife, who watch'd his face, Paled at a sudden twitch of his iron mouth; And 'O pray God that he hold up' she thought 'Or surely I shall shame myself and him.'

730

'Nor yours the blames for who beside your hearths Can take her place if echoing me you cry

"Our house is left unto us desolate"? But thou, O thou that killest, hadst thou known, O thou that stonest, hadst thou understood The things belonging to thy peace and ours! 740 Is there no prophet but the voice that calls Doom upon kings, or in the waste "Repent"? Is not our own child on the narrow way, Who down to those that saunter in the broad Cries "Come up hither," as a prophet to us? Is there no stoning save with flint and rock? Yes, as the dead we weep for testify-No desolation but by sword and fire? Yes, as your moanings witness, and myself Am lonelier, darker, earthlier for my loss. 750 Give me your prayers, for he is past your prayers, Not past the living fount of pity in Heaven. But I that thought myself long-suffering, meek, Exceeding "poor in spirit"-how the words Have twisted back upon themselves, and mean Vileness, we are grown so proud-I wish'd my voice A rushing tempest of the wrath of God To blow these sacrifices thro' the world-Sent like the twelve-divided concubine To inflame the tribes: but there—out yonder—earth 760 Lighten's from her own central Hell-O there The red fruit of an old idolatry-The heads of chiefs and princes fall so fast, They cling together in the ghastly sack---The land all shambles—naked marriages Flash from the bridge, and ever-murder'd France. By shores that darken with the gathering wolf, Runs in a river of blood to the sick sea. Is this a time to madden madness then? Was this a time for these to flaunt their pride? 770 May Pharach's darkness, folds as dense as those Which hid the Holiest from the people's eyes Ere the great death, shroud this great sin from all! Doubtless our narrow world must canvass it: O rather pray for those and pity them, Who, thro' their own desire accomplish'd, bring Their own gray hairs with sorrow to the grave-Who broke the bond which they desired to break, Which else had link'd their race with times to come-•Who wove charse webs to snare her purity, 780 Grossly contriving their dear daughter's good-Poor soils, and knew not what they did, but sat Ignorant, devising their own daughter's death! May not that earthly chastisement suffice? Have not our love and reverence left them bare? Will not another take their heritage? Will there be children's laughter in their hall For ever and for ever or one stone Left on another, or is it a light thing That I, their guest, their host, their ancient friend, 790 I made by these the last of all my race, Must cry to these the last of theirs, as cried Christ ere His agony to those that swere Not by the temple but the gold, and made. Their own traditions God, and slew the Lord, And left their memories a world's curse-"Behold, • Your house is left unto you desolate"?'

Ended he had not, but she brook'd no more:
Long since her heart had beat remorselessly,
Her crampt-up sorrow pain'd her, and a sense
Of meanness in her unresisting life.
Then their eyes wext her; for on entering
He had cast the curtains of their seat aside—
Black velvet of the costliest—she herself

Had seen to that: fain had she closed them now, Yet dared not stn to do it, only near'd Her husband inch by inch, but when she laid, Wifelike, her hand in one of his, he veil'd His face with the other, and at once, as falls A creeper when the prop is broken, fell The woman shricking at his feet, and swoon'd. Then her own people bore along the nave Her pendent hands, and narrow meagre face Seam'd with the shallow cares of fifty years: And her the Lord of all the landscape round Ev'n to its last horizon, and of all Who peer'd at him so keenly, followed out Tall and erect, but in the middle aisle Reel'd, as a footsore ox in crowded ways Stumbling across the market to his death, Unpitied; for he groped as blind, and seem'd Always about to fall, grasping the pews And oaken finials till he touch'd the door; Yet to the lychgate where his chariot stood, Strode from the porch, tall and creet again.

810

820

But nevermore did either pass the gate
Save under pall with bearers. In one month,
Thro' weary and yet ever wearier hours,
The childless mother went to seek her child;
And when he felt the silence of his house
About him, and the change and not the change,
And those fixt eyes of painted ancestors
Staring for ever from their gilded walls
On him their last descendant, his own head
Began to droop, to fall; the man became Imbecile; his one word was 'desolate;'
Dead for two years before his death was he;

But when the second Christmas came, escaped His keepers, and the silence which he felt, To find a deeper in the narrow gloom 840 By wife and child; nor wanted at his end The dark retinue reverencing death At golden thresholds; nor from tender hearts, And those who sorrow'd o'er a vanish'd race, Pity, the violet on the tyrant's grave. Then the great Hall was wholly broken down, And the broad woodland parcell'd into farms; And where the two contrived their daughter's good, Lies the hawk's cast, the mole has made his run, The hedgehog underneath the plantain bores, 850 The rabbit fondles his own harmless face, The slow-worm creeps, and the thin weasel there Follows the mouse, and all is open field.

- 1. Dust are our frames etc. The moral of the poem is given in the opening lines: Man is but a creature of the dust; his pride of wealth or ancestry is miserably vain and transient,—a fair outside, which shrinks into nothingness when brought into contact with the stern realities and mighty events of human life. Cf. Bible, General, ii. 7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground"; and ib. iii. 19: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Note that "gilded dust" and "pride" are in apposition to each other.
- 3. Like that long-buried body etc. An experience of this kind followed the opening of an Etruscan tomb at the ancient city of Tarquinii, near Corneto, in Italy. The discovery was made by Carlo Avvolta, a native of Corneto. While digging into a burial-mound for stones to mead a road, Signor Avvolta broke into the tomb of an Etruscan Lucumo or prince. "I beheld," he says, "a warrior stretched on a couch of rock, and in a few minutes I saw him vanish, as it were, under my eyes, for as the atmosphere entered the sepulchre, the armour, thoroughly oxidised, crumbled away into most minute particles: so that in a short time scarcely a vestige of what I had seen was left on the couch." The golden crown worn by the dead prince was so fragile that all but a small portion of it crumbled into dust on its way to Rome.
- 6. Slipt, glided, crumbled unawares. The word well expresses the suddenness and unexpectedness of the phenomenon.
  - 8. grizzled, gray-haired. From French gris, gray.
- 10. a mine of memories, full of information about old events. Memories = things remembered.
- 12. And been himself etc. The oldgman had himself been present at the events he relates. Cf. Vergil, Aneid, 11. 6:: Quorum pars magna fui, of which I (Aneas) was a great part; and Ulysses, 18: "1 am a part of all that I have met." Similarly Byron (Childe Harold, 111. 72) writes:

"I live not in myself, but I become Portion of that around me."

- 13. Sir Aylmer Aylmer. Notice the reduplicated Norman name, the Christian or personal name being the same as the family name. almighty, an epithet ordinarily confined to the Deity. It leads up to the appellation ("God") in the next line.
- M. The county God, lookal up to and almost worshipped by everyone in the county as the supreme authority.
- 15. shields, on which were blazoned the arms of his ancestors. These shields were hung, in the picture, from the branches of the tree. the family tree etc. The genealogical tree of his family was deputed as growing out of the chest of its royal founder, represented as lying on his back. The midrif or diaphragm is the muscle that separates the chest from the abdomen.
- 17. wyvern, a kind of two-logged dragon common in heraldry. The word is a doublet of riper. blazing, because it was gilded, and flushed in the sunlight. weathercock of the spire. The figure of a wyvern formed the time or weathercock on the spire of the eastle tower. Weathercock (i.e. wind-cock) has come to be synonymous with vane, because the vane was often in the form of a cock.
- 18. Stood from, was depicted in relief upon. wing'd, surmounted with its yinged form.
- 19. swang, archaic for swung. The wyvern, as a prominent part of the Aylnier arins, was frequently used as a sign by the inns in the county. windy, because inn signs are often suspended by iron hooks from horizontal bars affixed to lofty posts in the open road in front of the inns, and so are exposed to the wind. Cf. Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, 247:
  - "There is one old Hostel left us where they swing the Locksley shield."
- 20. Whose, i.e. Sir Aylmer's. pyramidal, rising to a point, like a pyramid. 'The long, narrow head points to the intellectual narrowness of the man.
- 21. Saw from etc., i.c. all the land within sight round his hall was his own property.
- 22. The subject of the sentence, "Sir Aylmer Aylmer," is repeated in the "he" of this line.
- 24. regretfully. His love for her was mingled with regret that she had not been a boy instead of a girl.
- 25. he that marries etc., the man that marries Edith shall take the name of Aylmer, so that the Aylmer name may not become extinct.

- 26. flat, decree. Lat. flat, 'let it be done,' 3rd person singular, present subjunctive, of fio. Similarly formed substantives are cxit ('he goes out'), deficit ('it is wanting'), interest ('it is profit ble').
- 27. a faded beauty of the Baths. She had formerly been a belle at the fashionable watering-places, such as Cheltenham or Tunbudge Wells, but had now lost her good looks.
- 28. Insipid etc., as shallow and characteriess as the figure of the queen on a playing-card.
- 29, 30 Her all .. sun, the sum total of her intelligence and behaviour being little better than a feeble reflection of ther husband. sickly, faint, shining through a veil of mist or cloud. Cf. Campbell, The Last Man, 11: "The Sun's eye had a sickly glare".
- 31. A land of hops. Hops are grown in the south of England, especially in Kent and Sussex. poppy-mingled. The poppy, a weed with a bright red flower, often grows wild in English wheat-fields. The scene of the story is placed in southern rural England, the duliest and quietest part of the country.
  - 33. sleepy, sluggish, stationary, behind the times. See l. 45.
- 35. Where almost etc. The villagers had so little intercourse with the outside world that they mostly intermarried with one another, and so they nearly all had the same name.
- 36-38. Where Aylmer Thrice over. Three generations of contemporary Aylmers and Averills had followed one another at the Hall and the Rectory respectively.
- 39. Bound in etc., united together by a friendship of very long standing. See l. 1369
- 40. open to each other. The immates of Rectory and Hall interchanged visits freely.
- 41. That Love ... closer, that there could be any intermarriage between the two families. well had made, would certainly have made.
- 42. bristle up, an effect commonly attributed to fear or horror. Cf. Shaks. Hamlet, I. v. 18-20, where the Ghost says he could unfold a tale which would make
  - "Thy knotted and combined locks to part And each particular hair to stand an end," Like quills upon the fretful perpentine."
- And Bible, Job iv. 15: "Then a spirit passed before my face the hair of my flesh stood up."
- 44, 45. sons of men Daughters & God. Of Bible, Genesis, vi. 2: "The sors of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair: and they took them wives of all which they chose." In the "invorted scripture," the term "sons of men" (instead of "sons of God") points to the mates of the Averill family; while in "daughters of Cod" (instead of "daughters of men")

the females of the Aylmer house are alluded to.

46-48. Probably Averall, if he had wished, might, like Sir Aylmer, have placed on the walls of his humbler abode his genealogical tree with numerous coats of arms suspended from it. See l. 15.

47. range of roofs. In allusion to the rambling and irregularly built rectories of former days, with gables of various heights.

- 50-52. When the red .. to death, i.e. in the times of the Wars of the Rosca between the houses of York and Lancaster. redder than itself, redder (with blood) than it was by nature. Cf. 1. 455: "that rival rose." With wounded peace etc., with the civil discord and bloody warfare of which each had been the cause. Cf. Shaks. Henry V. v. ii. 34: "Naked, poor, and mangled peace."
  - 53. 'Not proven,' i.e. Averil's verdict on the question of whether there had been a marriage between the two families, was that the case was not proved. Scotch law allows the verdict 'Not proven,' when the legal (as opposed to the moral) evidence is not sufficient for a consiction, in addition to the 'Guilty' and 'Not guilty' of English law. The past participial form proven illustrates the tendency of Northern Britain to turn weak verbs into strong ones; cf. Scotch putten (for put), liften (for lifted), sweaten (for sweated).
  - 56. He lean'd etc., he desired to be esteemed for his own merits and not for his lineage.
  - 59. Call'd to the bar. To qualify for a call to the bar (i.e. for becoming a harrister), a law-student has to keep 12 terms at one of the Inns of Court. See l. 105 and note. For the repetition of call'd in this line, see note to 1. 487.
  - 60. one low voice, i.e. the soft voice of Edith. Cf. Maud, Part II. iv. 5: "The delight of low replies" (said of lovers' talk).
  - A distant kinship etc. Leolin, unlike Averill, would often claim a distant blood-relationship with Edith, whose gentle heart beat faster with loving emotion as she listened to what he said.
  - 64. Sanguine, of a ruddy complexion, fresh-coloured. Shakspere (1 Henry VI. 1v. i. 92) applies the epithet to the leaves of a rose. but, only, just.
- •65. islet, the bright-red centre of the blossom of the chestnut tree. Chestnut is short for theater-nut, chesten representing the Lat. Castanea; from Castana, a city in Pontus where chestnut trees abounded. Damson (Damascus) and peach (Persicus) have a similar derivation.

- 66. still, ever, continually.
- 67. joyful ... joyful. See note to l. 487.
- 68. Beneath etc., from underneath a flowing mass of golden hair as thick as a lion's mane. Cf. The Princess, VI. 148:

"Lioness,

That with your long locks play the Lion's mane!"

- 69. Their best and brightest, i.e. his eyes sparkled most tenderly and brightly of all when they looked into her eyes. In 'been'd their best (beaming)' there is an ellipse of the cognate object, as in 'he tried his hardest (trying),' 'he broathed his last (breath)?' Cf. 1, 227.
- 70. Edith, in apposition with her in hers (= 'the eyes of her'), pensive beauty etc. Her face would have been perfectly heauthful but for its somewhat sad expression.
- 71. subject to etc., readily influenced by circumstances or feelings; cf. ll. 75-77.
- 72 Shone like a mystic star etc. Her beauty was more striking at one time than at another, [like the variable star of Astronomy with its maxima and minima of brightness. H. T.] The term 'glory,' for brightness, is adopted from Bible, I Con xv. 41: "One star different from another star in glory."
- 74. bounteously made, [healthfully and beautifully made. H. T.] Cf. 1. 107.
- 75. so feely. Her frame or constitution was so delicate and sensitive.
- 77. A joyous etc., a joyful influence seemed to make her form expand, as a flower opens when turned to the sunlight. So, under the influence of love and faith, Laodamia's "bosom heaves and spreads, her stature grows" (Wordsworth, Laodamia, 11).
- 80. So much the boy foreran, Leolin was so much (viz. five years) older than Edith. date, age.
- 82. decad, an aggregate consisting of ten; here, ten years. It is usually spelt decade; but Tennyson prefers the spelling decad, as placing the accent on the first syllable; cf. Milton's brigad for the modern brigade (Par. Lost, II. 532). Decad and half are to be parsed as adverbial objectives of Amount or Degree.
- 85, 86. with her dipt... prone swing, the swift downward ("prone") motion of the swing made the air rush against their faces. Note the rhythm of 1. 86, with its unusual number of unaccented syllables expressing rapid motion; see General Introduction, p. xix,  $(\beta)$ . Scan:
  - "Against | the rush | of the air | in the | prone swing."
- 87. blossom-ball, flowers with their interlaced stalks, all gathered to the centre and the blossoms outside, so as to form a ball of blossom. daisy chain, daisies with their stalks fastened together by being inserted into one another through holes made in each stalk, so as to make a chain or festoon.

33

- 88. sow'd her name etc. He planted seeds (of cress, etc.) in lines and circles representing the letters of her name, so that, when they grew up, the word Eduth appeared in green characters.
- 90. fairy footings, circles of rank grass, once supposed to be produced by the darking of fairies on the spot, but now known to be the result of the circular propagation of a fungus below the surface, the decay of which manures the soil and so makes the grass grow thicker. Cf. Shaks. Tempest, v. i. 36-38:—

"You demi-puppets that By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make, Whereof the owe not bites."

Merry Wives of Windsor, v. v. 69, 70:

"And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing, Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring."

And Midsummet Night's 1) ream, 11. 1. 86:

"To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind."

Also Drayton's Nymphidia, 69-72:

"And in their courses make that Round, In Meadowes and III Marshes found, Of them so call'd the Fayrie ground."

- 91, 92. fairy palms fairy pines. The cowship, which is ready, straight stalk and cluster of drooping flowers at the top, looks, in the children's fancy, like a miniature palm tree; the mare'stail, with its erect stem and whoils or horizontal outgrowth of leaves at short intervals, looks like a miniature pine-tree. The common Mare's-tail (Hippuris Vulgaris) is plentiful not only in Great Britain but throughout Europe and North America. For fairy, cf. The Brook, 45: "Many a fairy foreland."
- 55. the tiny pitted target cto. Some flowers, like the dandelion, when run to seed, bear a fanciful resemblance to little targets stuck full of minute, feathered arrows. ('f. The Poet, 19: "The arrow-seeds of the field flower." English children are fond of blowing off these feathery seeds, the number of whifis that it takes to disengage them all being supposed to represent what o'clock it is at the time. Pitted, full of little hollows (where the seeds are inserted).
- 95. make-believes. The children "pretended," in their play, that the cowslips were fairy palms, etc.
  - 96. forged, made up, invented; used in a good sense here.

97. But that was later, i.e. he made up and told her these tales when he had grown somewhat older.

100. Crown'd, rewarded with success. sketches, descriptions.

101. a passion yet unborn, a feeling of love as yet undeveloped.

102. the music of the moon, the song which the nightingale sings to the moon or by moon-light. Cf. Southey, Roderick, XXI.:

"And now the nightingale ... poured To the cold moon a richer, stronger strain Than that with which the lyric lark salutes The new-born day."

This song is represented as dormant in the egg till the young bird is hatched, and becomes ble to sing it. plain. The greenish-brown eggs of the nightingale give no outward sign of the harmony that lurks within them; and similarly Leolin's, "rude sketches" gave no hint of their hidden passion.

105. Temple-eaten terms, terms spent in studying haw at the Temple. Three dinners at least have or had to be eaten in Hall cach term by the Temple law-students. Hence the phrase 'to cat one's terms,' i.c. to be adaw-student. The Inner and the Middle Temple are two of the four Inns of Court in London conferring the degree of Barrister-at-law.

107. in lavish bounty moulded, liberally endowed with beauty of form. Cf. "bounteously made," 1. 74.

108. the maiden woman-grown, when the maiden had grown into a woman;—an s bsolute clause.

109. wasted, spent freely; cf. l. 689. Waste has little or no reproachful meaning here; cf. Milton, Sonnet, xx. 4:

"When shall we sometimes meet, and by the fire

Hclp waste a sullen day?"

And Par. Lost. 11. 694-5:

"Here condemned To waste eternal days in woe and pain."

And Sir Lancelot and Queen (luinevere, 1, 44:

"To waste his whole heart in one kiss " Upon her perfect lips."

Leolin used frequently to come and stay with his brother. First, he spent the Easter vacation with him; next he came for the Lidsummer, and finally for the Christmas vacation.

110. The tented winter-field et. A hop-garden in winter time, with the hop-poles stacked leaning against one another in separate, tent-shaped groups all over the ground, is compared to a field covered with the tents of an encamp-ing earmy; the same garden in spfing, with the hop-poles set up to support the stems, is compared to an army in battle array with spears erect.

35

- 112. That soon should wear the garland, that were soon, in autumn, to be wreathed with clusters of hop-flowers.
- 113. When burr and bine etc., when the hop-cones were gathered, and the stems removed from the poles. Burr is used here for the rough, scaly-cope produced by the hop plant; bine for the long twining stem, much like that of the vine. Cf. woodbine.
- 116. phosphorescence, luminosity as seen in sea water, and caused by the presence of vast numbers of light giving animal-cules. The dull monotony (like stagnant water) of life at the Hall was broken in upon by the youthful spirits (like a rushing tide) of Leolin, with a sparkling gaiety (like phosphorescence on the sea when its surface is broken by waves) which was delightful even to the "insipid" Lady Aylmer. For a similar metaphor, cf. 1. 633.
- 117, 118. yet, as yet, up till now. laid No bar between them, placed no prohibition upon their intercourse.
- 119, 120. bending ... world, relaxing his dignified attitude so far as to treat mankind at large with a moderate amount of complaisance and approval. half-allowing, half-approving. This allow is from Lat. allaudare, 'to applaud,' and differs from allow, 'to permit,' from Lat. allocare, 'to assign.' (f. Shaks. Troilus and Cressida, III. ii. 97: "Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove."
- 121 mighty, mightily, very; said with some irony and perhaps with a play upon the other sense of the word.
- 121. his pride etc., his pride was too deeply rooted in his character for him to make a display of it outwardly in his demeanour.
- 123. like an Aylmer in his Aylmerism, showing all the supercilious nonchalance or indifference that characterised the Aylmer race. For the word Aylmerism, cf. Robert Browning's (The Ring and the Book, v. 437) similar coinage "Franceschinihood," the dignity of the Franceschini family; and Cicero's (Fam. III. vii. 5) jocose formations, Appietas ant Lentulitas, the nobility or grandeur of Appius or Lentulus.
  - 125. Newfoundland's, Newfoundland dog's (walking with her).
- 126. for he rose etc. The dog rose on his hind legs at the end of his chain, barking in his eagerness to accompany them in their walk.
- 128-132. how should Love ... Master of all. People often fall love with each other at their first casual meeting, when their mutual glances suddenly kindle the flame of love; but it is seldom that those who have been on familiar terms with each other from early youth ("dawn") become lovers. When, however, that happens, their love gains a complete mastery over them. the cross-lightnings etc. Of. Shaks. Merchant of Venice, III. ii. 67, 68:

"It (Love) is engendered in the eyes, With gazing fed."

And Cymbeline, v. v. 394.5: "She, like harmless lightfirity, throws her eye on him." H. Coleridge also sings of "the lovelight in her (his mistress's) eye." For master of all, cf. the refrain of Albert Græme's song in Scott's Lay of the Last Minstrel: "Love shall still be lord of all."

134-135. a bar Between them unconscious of any obstacle to their union; not "knowing their differences" (l. 274).

135. plight or broken ring. They had not plighted theif troth to each other (i.e. they were not engaged to be married), nor had they each taken half of a broken ring, as lovers sometimes do in token of their betrothal.

136. an immemorial intimacy, see 1, 39 and note.

138. that hung etc., that kept watch over her peace and comfort, as a mother bird broods over her young ones. Cf. Christ's words of yearning over Jerusalem: "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings!" (Bible, Matthew, xxiii, 37)

140. other, i.e. other than a brother's love, viz. that of a lover.

142. Gather'd the blossom etc., indulged their love for each other, of which the supply was inexhaustible. For the metaphorical blossom, cf. The Princess, Prologue, 163 (of College undergraduates):

"(They) caught the blossom of the flying terms."

For The magic cup, cf. Byron, Childe Harold, III. 8: "Life's enchanted cup" (i.e. the pleasures of life).

144. half reveal'd her to herself, gave her a hint of what her real feelings were towards Leolin. For the "whisper," see ll. 187, 188.

145. her lodges, the lodges or gate-keepers' houses at the different gates of her father's grounds.

146, a silence. The brook ran smoothly in places, and so made no sound.

147 sallow, with sallows or willows on its banks. Sallow is from the noot sar, to flow, because it grows near water. See note to 1. 539. Willows are called "sallies" in Here-fordshire.

37

149. dimpling died into each other. The knolls were full of sloping hollows, where they met and were lost in one another.

150. a nest in bloom, embosomed in flowers, as a nest is in foliage. Cf. Cowper, Task, 1. 225-7:

. "So thick beset .

With foliage of such dark redundant growth, I call'd the low-roof'd lodge the peasant's nest."

And Enoch Arden, 1. 59, who

" made a home

For Annie, neat and nest-like."

152. summer-blanch'd etc. The walls of the cottage were covered in summer with the white blossoms of the traveller's-joy (Clematis Vitalba), and in autumn covered partly with its feathery seed-vessels and partly with ivy. These feathery seed-vessels have a resemblance to grey hair, hence the plant is sometimes called Old Man's Beard ("parcel-bearded"). It is called Traveller's-Joy because in winter it is one of the most conspicuous and ornamental of wayside plants. Cf. The Golden Year, 1. 63:

"Like an oaken stock in winter woods O'er flourished with the hoary clematis."

For parcel in composition, compare Shakspere, 2 Henry IV. II. i. 94, "a parcel gilt goblet."

155. The warm-blue breathings etc., the blue smoke of a fire-place inside the cottage came out of a chimney that was covered with vine and honeysuckle. Cf. Princess, VII. 201:

"Azure pillars of the hearth Arise to thee.".

157. another wore etc., another was covered with the clinging jasmine climber (Jasminum Officinale) thick-set with its white, star-shaped blossoms. Cf. Cowper, Task, vi. 176 (of the jasmine): "The bright profusion of her scatter'd stars."

159. gillyflowers, the Clove Gillyflower, Deanthus Caryophyllus, a brilliant pink flower. It is a corruption of the Old French giroffee, the Low Lat. caryophyllum, meaning 'nut-leaf' or nut-leaved clove.

160. a milky-way on earth, i.e. the garden path of the cottage was so thickly planted with lilies on either side, that it looked like an earthly milky-way—a broad white zone in the sky consisting of innumerable fixed stars. Cf. Wordsworth, The Daffodis:

"Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the milky way,
They stretched in never-ending line."

161. Like visions etc. The "Northern dreamer" is Swedenborg, who was born at Stockholm in 1688. He claimed to have visions and revelations of the spiritual world, where, he declared, there are cities, books, merchandise, natural objects, etc., as on earth, but in an infinitely more perfect state than they are in this world.

163. to the martin-haunted eaves. The hollyhocks grew so tall and thick that they reached almost up to the eaves of the cottage roof, where the martins (a kind of swallow) had built their nests. Cf. Shaks. Macbeth, 1. vi. 5-7:

"The temple-haunting martlet does approve, By his loved mansionry, that the heaven's breath Smells wooingly here."

Eaves (Old Eng. efese) is a true singular.

- 164. A summer burial etc., was in summer time deeply buried in hollyhocks. The hollyhock (Althea rosea) is a showy, pink, or white, flower.
- 165. Each, its own charm. Had is, of course, to be repeated after each; as also after this are fone above, Il. 160, 163.
- 167. of her poor, by the poor people that she visited. For this old use of of, cf. Abbott's Shakes. Grammar, §170, and Bible, 1 Chronicles, x. 3: "He (Saul) was wounded of the archers."
- 168. For she. The subject she is separated from its verb was adored by a parefithesis of eleven lines. Such a sentence would be intolerable in ordinary prose; here it is borne along by the sustaining power of Rhythm (see Earle's Philology, § 657). lowly-lovely, 'meekly beautiful'; a good example of Tennyson's fondness for alliterative compounds; cf. his gloomy-gladed, million-myrtled, tiny-trumpeting, and see General Introduction, p. xx.
- 169. Queenly responsive etc., courteously acknowledging the salutes of the farm labourers when they lifted themselves from their work and touched their caps to her.
- 171. sowing hedgerow texts, distributing texts or verses of Scripture to the villagers either in the form of religious tracts or by way of exhortation.

172. from a height, with an air of superiority; in a patronising fashion.

175. flattering, glorifying, shedding a lustre upon. Cf. Recollections of the Arabian Nights, 1, 76:

" Flattering the golden prime Of good Haroun Alraschid."

And Shaks. Sonnets, XXXIII. :

"Full many a glorious morning have I seen
"Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye."

roofs, cottages.

- 176. Revered as theirs, treated by her with respect as being their own.
- 177. infancy, for infant, as, in the next line, palsy is for palsied (or paralysed) person; abstract for concrete. Cf. Demeter and Persephone, 89: "a far-off friendship" (for friend).
- 178. bedridden, confined to his bed; O. E. bedrida, a bedrider, a sarcastic term for a disabled man (Skeat).
- 180. Having the warmth etc., his hand-shake was marked by a confliality and vigour that showed its sincerity.
- 181. A childly way, a kind and sympathetic way of behaving towards children.
- 182. proven, tested, genuine. See note to 1.53 above. true is an adverb modifying ringing.
- 183. Were no false passport etc., were valid means of winning the ready loyalty of the cottagers, among whom once etc.
- 185. the warmth, i.e. of the fire on the hearth.
- 186. five-beaded, with their has toes, which, when seen from underneath, look like a row of beads.
- 188. 'em, a provincialism, is an elided form not of them, but of the old hem, accusative plural of he. marriages are made in heaven, marriages are arranged and ordered by God—implying that Leolin and Edith were meant by Divine Providence to marry each other. The phrase is a common proverb.
- 189. A flash etc., a slight outburst of jealousy on Leolin's part made it clear to her that she loved him.
  - 191. swarthy faces, his Indian servants.
- 193. Sear'd by the close ecliptic, tanned by the tropical sua. The ecliptic is the apparent path of the sun round the earth. For fair followed by Fairer, see note to 1. 487.
  - 194. ruled the hour, took the lead in conversation.
- 196. a deedful day, a day of great events or exploits in his military career.
- 197. Sir Aylmer etc., Sir Aylmer became so interested that he sometimes left off his usual habit of smiling patronisingly and saying 'Good! etc.'
- 199. with her fingers etc. She sat with her hands clasped over her knees (covered with her sille dress) and twirled her thumbs—an attitude and gesture indicative of listless indolence. Cf. Cowpey, Conversation, 115 (of the victim of the "noisy man"): ¥I twirl my thumbs, fall back into my chair."
- 201. all her vital spirits, the whole of the little animation that she possessed; all her scanty powers of attention. In the use of the expression "vital spirits" there seems to be an allusion to the old notion of the existence in all living beings of spiritus vitales, vital spirits, in regird to which Bacon says that "the affections (no doubt) do make the spirits more powerful and active; and especially those affections which draw the spirits into the eyes; which are two: love and envy" (Works, 11. 653).

- 203. flowerage, flower-patterns. Cf. a similar abstract formation, acreage, 1. 651.
  - 204. in which, i.e. drest in which.
- 205. The meteor of a splendid season, for a brief period the belle of a grand season (i.e. those months of the year when Society meets) in London of at the Baths (see 1.27).
- 206. ah so long ago. The ah represents the sigh that accompanies the lady's reminiscence of her long-past triumphs.
- 207. minuet, a slow, graceful dance, so called from the pasmenus or 'short steps' in it. Fr. menuet, dim. of menu, small, Lat, minutus.
- 208. But Edith's etc. Edith was full of interest in his stories and eagerly followed him, in her imagination, through his dangerous adventures.
- 209. passes, conjunctures, crises. Note the quick movement of the rhythm, appropriate to the sense of the line:
  - snátch'd thro' | the périllous passles of | his life.
- 212. Wife-hunting, he was looking out for a wife. Cf. fortune-hunter, one who is in search of a rich wife.
- 4216. shook the house, caused much excitement in the household.
- 218, 219. He flow'd ... tested, his wish to marry her was at one time strong, at another time weak, and so he left her intending to return after he had made trial of other ladies. These lines suggest an explanation of his departure after having made Edith so many presents. For flow'd and cbb'd, cf. Shaks. Troilus and Cressida, 11. iii. 139, where Agamemon speaks of Actilles, changeable fits as "his ebbs, his flows."
- 222. Fine as ice-ferns etc. The delicate gold inlay of the sheath (seen in the well-known Guzerati work) resembled the fern-like configuration on window-panes in winter, which is caused by the atmosphere of the room becoming frozen on the glass. Cf. The May Queen, 11, 13: "The frost is on the pane."
- 233. I know not etc., I do not know where the work came from originally, nor to what nationality its artificers belonged.
  - 227. having fought their last, an instance of the ellipse of the cognate object (fight). See note to 1. 69, and cf. Goldsmith, The Deserted Village, 366:

"When the poor exiles, every pleasure past,

Hung round the bowers, and fondly looked their last."
Comrades is in the absolute case.

229. beetling, overhanging. Cf. Shaks. Hamlet, 1. iv. 71:

"The dreadful summit of the cliff

That beetles o'er his base into the sea."

Skeat says the word is apparently coined by Shakspere, the idea being adopted from the M. E. bitelbrowed, beetle-browed, having projecting brows. The word, however, is perhaps derived, not from beetle, the insect, but from beetle, a mallet, in allusion to its projecting head.

232. For pleasure followed by please, see note to 1. 287.

233. costly, wealthy, munificent. Similarly Shakspere (Merchant of Venice, II. ix. 94) has "costly summer."

236. wealthy, richly wrough, splendid.

238. Slight, careless, offhand.

240. 'A gratious gift etc.', said ironically:—'This sharp weapon is a pleasing and appropriate gift for a lady!'

244. 'Ma?, 'Do you give it me?', said by Leolin as she offers him the dagger.

245. ungraciousness itself, entirely made up of discourtesy.

249. 'Why then I love it'. Edith's not caring for the dagger shows that she does not care for the donor, the Indian kinsman. Leolin is so relieved in his mind at this, that his dislike of the dagger is changed into love for it.

250. neither loved nor liked. The double expression is emphatic: 'he did not like it at all'. Loved re-echoes the love of the preceding line; see note to 1, 487.

251. Blues and reds, the colours of the rival political parties, Whigs and Tories, in the borough or county. The neighbour carry's that he thinks the "blues" (probably the Tory party) were sure to win the election of their candidate for Parliament.

254. a bottom, a dale or hollow; cp. Shaks. As You Like it, Iv. iii. 79: 6 Down in the neighbour bottom." the brush, the fox's tail, the prize of the fox hunter who is first "in at the death," i.e. who first reaches the place where the fox is caught by the bounds.

255. My Peter, my son Peter.

256 pook pitten fellow, some poacher, whose face was scarred by the pits or little hollows left by small-pox. For the alliterative compound, of General Introduction, n. (2), (e), (5).

257. Then made etc., then he clapped his hands and rubbed them together in his glee.

260. The birds were warm, the game that he had poached was found fresh-killed in his possession. Cf. Shaks. Romeo and Juliet, v. iii. 175: "Here lies ... Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead."

263. This blacksmith border-marriage, a Gretna Green marriage. Gretna is a Scotch village close to the border between England and Scotland, and was fanious as the place where for many years runaway marriages were contracted; since, according to Scotch law, parties could be married by making a mutual declaration before witnesses of their willingness to many, without license, banns, or priest. John Paisley, known as "the blacksmith," who officiated at these marriages, lived on a common or green between Gretna and Springfield. An Act of Parliament, passed in 1856, made these marriages illegal.

264. Raw from the nursery, i.e. quite a young girl, who seemed to have only just left the nurse's are.

265. That cursed France etc., i.e. this marriage is one of the results of the French Revolution, and its doctrie that all are equal in social standing. The time of the poem is supposed to be 1793, when the French Revolution of 1789 was at its height (see II. 464, 760-768). egalities is the anglicised plural of the French word egalities, equality. The motto of the French Republic was, "Liberty, Equality. Fraternity," and by his "Rights of Man," Lafayette demanded the actual equality of every individual. In July, 1790, the National Assembly carried by acclamation a decree abolishing all titles of nobility in "a land of natural freedom and equality." Cf. Beautiful City, 2: "O you with your passionate shrick for the rights of an equal humanity."

267. With nearing chair etc., (he said this) bringing his chair nearer to Sir Aylmer, and speaking in low, confidential tones.

268. talk'd, gossiped about the matter, which drew their attention.

271. a notion, an idea of marrying Edith.

272. entangled, inveigled into promising to marry Leolin.

273. stiffening, assuming a haughty demeanour.

274. their differences, i.e. in rank and station. See note to 11. 234, 235.

278, for on her etc. Edith was the first to experience the violent anger of Sir Aylmer and his wife at their discovery (implied in the term "watch'd" of the previous line).

280. the Tephtha's daughter, the picture of Jephtha's daughter. She was the first to meet her father after his return from victory

43

- over the Ambienites, and so was sacrificed to God according to his yow. The picture was thus, at it were, prophetic of the fate of Sir Aylmer's daughter. See Dream of Fair Women, 181-240.
- 281. Of early rigid colour, painted with the hard colouring and rigid outlines characteristic of the Byzantine school, before Cimabue's time. under which. The picture was hung above the door-way.
- 282. counter, opposite; Lat. contra, against.
  - 287. the Powers of the House, Sir Aylmer and Lady Aylmer.
  - 239. false, painted, rouged.
- 290. by his own stale devil spurr'd, goaded to fury by his inveterate vice of family pride.
- 291. breathing hard, from passion and excitement. For the two hards in this line, see note to 1. 487.
- 299. Her sicklier iteration, Lady Aylmer's feebler repetition of her husband's phrases.
- 300. mark me, observe what I say. are to make, are for making, have yet to be made or won. Similarly we say 'to make money' for 'to gain money.' To make is a gerundial infinitive expressing result.
  - 301. out of mine, i.e. by marrying my daughter, an heiress.
- 302. practised on her, worked upon her feelings; deceived her by your arts and machinations. Practise, as used by Shakspere and Bacon, carries some sense of crafty or underhand dealing, which it still retains in the phrase, 'to practise upon a person.'
  - 303. forget herself, forget her own position and dignity.
- 306. Far as we track ourselves, throughout the history of our family, going back, though it does, to such distant times.
  - 312. look'd into yourself, examined your own feelings.
- 315. prodigious! monstrous. These were words etc., according to Sir Aylmer's own view of the matter, this statement of this shaped immense forbearance on his part.
- 316. As meted etc., when considered in the light of his own dignity and importance.
- 318, 319. o'I so foul etc., i.e. I to be so foul etc.; to think that I should be so foul etc. Foul, base, infamous.
- 321. the wind-hover, the Keatrel (Falco tinnunculus), a bird of the howk kind, so called from its hovering in the wind or remaining poised in the breeze ("hanging in balance") without fluttering its wings.
- 322. reddening from the storm within. The violence of his emotions sent the blood into his face and made it red.

323. broke all bonds of courtesy, completely violated the obligations of politeness.

326. drove etc., pushed the footstool violently away from in front of him with his feet.

328. teeth that ground etc. He ground his teeth together in his passion as people do when troubled with a nightmare.

329. still, all the time, continually

- 330. half-aghast. The true spelling is agast, past participle of M. E. agasten, to terrify.
- 331. lintel, the beam over a door-way; Low Lat. lintellus, of limitellus, dim. of limes, limitis, a border.
- 332. a hoary face etc. His white hair made Sir Aylmer a fit object of reverence for his family.
- 333. the hearth, 'the fire ide circle, the family'; abstract for concrete.
- 334. Beneath a pale etc. A contrast is drawn between the flushed and passionate face of Sir Aylmer and the pale, calm moon shining overhead. The wild mood of the man is emphasised by its want of harmony with his natural surroundings.
- 339, 340 his passions .. motion, 'his feelings being all in a state of violent excitement and directing his movements'—an absolute clause. For the metaphor from the tide of a river, cf. 1. 218.
  - 341. bright, with the moon-light.
- 342. foam'd away his heart, gave unrestrained vent to his aggry feelings. Cf. eEschylus, Agamemnon, 1030, έξαφρίζεσθαι μένος, 'foams her fury away' (like a horse); and Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, 124:
  - "Lash'd on every tocky square
    Their surging charges foam'd themselves away."
- 348. He never yet had set etc., he had never hitherto exposed his daughter for sale in our Western marriage markets, where our beautiful women let themselves be sold to the highest bidden (i.e. choose husbands for their wealth). The sentence means that he had never tried to get hold of a rich husband for his daughter. The allusion is to the actual sale, in the "woman-markets" of the East, of Caucagian girls for Turkish or Persian has ems.
- 353. What is etc., what is the elegant (he is speaking ironically) suplismism Society uses to express the idea? The noun jut (from which the vertical derived) is a contraction of juliet, diminutive of Jill, a common female name, short for Juliana.
  - 354. I say it for your peace, I tell you this to show you that, having been isappointed in love myself, I can sympathise with you in your love-trouble.

355. as bearing etc. Since he loved the woman, Averill felt himself humiliated by her shameful conduct.

361. in all my fold, among all my parishioners. Christ (Bible, John x. 14) described himself as the "good shepherd," His disciples as His "sheep" or "flok," and the Christian Church as "the fold of the sheep" Hence a clergyman is called a pastor, the Latin word for 'shepherd.' Cf. Il. 600, 631.

363. whiter, purer; so whitest = 'most innocent' above, l. 361. C. Henry Vaughan, The Recreat, 6: "a white, celestial thought."

366. Let her parents be, leave them alone; never mind what they say or do.

371. on it, in dependence upon it; he would give them enough money to enable them to marry.

373. wealthier, not in money but in happiness at having done a good action.

374. Mamman, money worship. Mammon (Syriac for 'wealth') was the Syrian god of riches answering to the Plutus of Greek and Roman mythology. Leolin declared that men and women, being prevented from marrying by money considerations, betook themselves to debauchery and prostitution. See Il. 388-391 below; and cf. Locksley Hall, 100:

"Every door is barr'd with gold, and opens but to golden keys."

375. nature crost, the thwarting of nature, i.c. by the prevention of marriages. For the construction, of. 1. 537 and note.

376. adulteries, taints, impurities.

377. saturate, pervade, fill with infection. soul with body, soul along with body.

378. they might be proud, they had good reason to be proud of it, since its worth consisted in its being borne by Edith. rated, scolded. Probably a different word from rate, to value.

381. pheasant-lords, these country gentlemen who had no higher aim than to preserve the game on their estates. Pheasants and partridges are the two principal English game-birds.

382. of a thousand years, these men who for a thousand years post had done nothing better than breed partridges.

383. mildew'd in their thousands, who had grown indolent and effect in the possession of great riches. Mildew is Old Eng. meledicion, honey-dew, so samed from the sticks appearance of some kinds of blight.

384. Since Egoers, since the time of Egbers, king of Wessex (802-839), by whom "the whole English race in Britain was for the first time knit together under a single ruler" (Green). The greater, so much greater. (This the is the old the or the, the instrumental case of the used as a demonstrative; as in 'the sooner the better.'

385. Fall back...that! to think that they should have recourse to their ancient lineage to support their dignity, and remain ignobly satisfied with that.

387. a vantage-ground for nobleness; what fools they are to act so, when they have so important a help (in high birth) towards noble action! Vantage is a short form of advantage.

388. a quintessence of man, one who comprised within himself all the best qualities of human nature. Quintessence (Let. quinta essentia, fifth essence of nature) is the pure essence of anything, in allusion to the old theory of the existence of a superior fifth element, aether, in addition to the ordinary four—earth, air, fire, and water.

389. The life of all, one who infused his own energy and animation into all around him.

391. Had rioted etc., had killed himself by planging into a career of dissipation.

393. powers, abilities.

395. the world should ring etc. Leolin declared that he would win such world-wide renown that the old, worn-out race of the Aylmers should be ashamed of their pride of ancestry in comparison with his achievements.

397. Chancellor, Lord High Chancellor of England, the first lay subject after the princes of the blood royal, and head of the legal profession.

398. your grief, i.e. the jilting etc. mentioned in Il. 354-357.

399. Give me my fling, let me have free scope to indulge my feelings; let me give them free utterance.

403. like a storm, i.e. violently, passionately. Cf. l. 215.

404. How low etc., that he was in a state of nervous prostration.

405. beeswing, old port wine. Bee's wing is a thin, light film in port wine, indicative of considerable age, so called from its resemblanes to the wing of a bee, and is here put for the wine itself.

The middle English form is binne.

406. the waning red, the gradual change from a red to a rich brown colour that takes place in port wine with advancing age. Age improves the flavour of wine.

467. The vintage is the year on which the vine-crop of which it was made was gathered. The year was the date when the present Sir Aylmer reached the age of twenty-one.

- 409. flame, and fell again, became once more passionately excited and then quieted down.
- 410. That much etc., that we ought readily to excuse people's failings; we must not be too hard on them. This conclusion results from the mellowing influence of the wine.
- 412. his purpose held; his purpose was unchanged, he still determined to carry out his purpose (of making himself a name); see 1. 394.
- 425. Which breaks all bonds but ours, i.c. the rupture between myself and the Aylmer family renders all bonds of friendship, loyalty etc. between me and them woid; the only bond that remains is that of love between you and me.
  - 426. Sacred, devotedly bound.
- 428. The rain of heaven etc. The repetition is justified by the additional emphasis it gives, and by the new phase of feeling introduced in the repeated phrase by the striking epithet careless, pointing, as it does, to the unsympathetic attitude of Nature towards human sorrow. Cf. the gorgeous picture of the "beauteous hat eful isle" in Enoch Arden (ll. 568-575), in contrast with the lonely desolation of Enoch, who "dwelt with ternal summer ill-content." For an instance of emphatic repetition, cf. Milton, Par. Lost, ii. 1021-2:
  - "So he with difficulty and labour hard • Mov'd on, with difficulty and labour he."

And for one of repetition with an added notion. cf. Ib. 558-560;

"(Others) reason'd high Of Providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate, Fix'd fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute."

Cf. also Enoch Arden, 507, 508:

"So these were wed and merrily rang the bells, Merrily rang the bells and they were wed."

- 431. roar'd the pine, i.e. with the wind in its branches. Another touch pointing to the aloofness of Nature from their trouble.
- 433. known but smatteringly, that we had only a superficial knowledge of previously. The old verb smatter, from which the noun smattering comes, is connected with smack, a noise made with the lips, and hence a gabbling or prating.
- 436. That codeless myriad etc. These lines describe the complexity of English Law with its undigested mass of precedents (i.e. previous parallel cases upon which judgments in a new case are based) and its medley of unclassified cases. Hallam has described it as the accumulation of statute on statute and precedent on precedent, "till no industry can acquire nor any intellect digest the mass of learning that grows upon the parting student."

438. wit or fortune, cleverness or good luck.

411. Lightning etc., play of humour, sparkling and evanescent. Scan:

Lightning | of the hour, | the pun, | the scurri lous tale. Notice the quick movement of the thythm in the first two feet, echoing the sense; and cf. General Introduction, p. xix. (β).

- 442. Old scandals etc Old scandals (contained in law-cases etc.) of seventy years ago, which have been forgotten in the accumulation of fresh scandals, now also forgotten and followed by the current scandal, which is itself destined to be forgotten. For decads, see I. 82 and note.
- 445, 446. bent ... To make, postic for 'bent (i.e. determined) upon making.' To make disproof of scorn, to prove how unjust was the scorn with which he had been treated
  - 448. Charier, more sparing (than others).
  - 449. a breathing-while, a period of cessation from work.
  - 450. niggard, scanty; an adjective here.
  - 451. the river-bank, the bank of the Thames.
- 452. Harder the times were etc. In 1793, the supposed date of this poem, there was much poverty and distress among the labouring classes in consequence of the low rate of wages and the high price of wheat. The state of English prisons, which were haunts of misery and crucity, was not improved till the following year, through Howard's exertions. The criminal law was most severe: a petty theft was punishable by death; and before Sir Robert Peel's Acts of 1824 nearly one hundred felonies were capital offences.
  - 453. according, i.e. in harmony with the times.
- 455. the gardens of that rival rose, the Temple Gardens (see note to 1. 105). It was here that Shakspere (I Henry VI. 11. iv.) represents Richard Plantagenet as plucking a white rose, and the Earl of Somerset a red, and calling upon those present to do the same in token of adhesion to his cause. Cf. 11. 50-52.
- 456. Yet fragrant etc. The roses kept their fragrance for Leolin, because his heart was softened and refined by the happy memories of his talks with Edity.
- 458. Far purelier, [when the city was smaller and less smoky. H. T.]
- 450. to flush his blood with air. A graphic allusion to the process by which the venous blood, in its passage through the lungs, is subjected to the action of the air and arterialised. To flush means "to freshen," or perhaps "to redden" in allusion to the fact that the venous blood, which is of a dark crimson colour, becomes florid or scarlet in passing through the lungs.

460. My lady's cousin, the "Indian kinsman" of l. 190.

- 461. Half-sickening etc. He had retired on pension, and was half-tired of his long days of leisure.
  - 462. Drove in upon, came rushing in; burst in upon him.
- 463. Ran a Malayan amuck etc., made a furious and indiscriminate attack, in the Malay fashion, upon the existing state of thing. Amuch is the Malay word umuk, a kind of mania or uncontrollable fury among the Malays, and other natives of the East, which is often produced by bhang, and under the influence of which a man rushes madly onward, dagger in hand, striking at every one he meets. The phrase "to run a muck" is common, the a being detached from muck as if it were the indefinite article. (f. Pope, Saures, 1. 69, 70:

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet To run a muck, and it at all I meet."

The original reading of the text, as late as 1874, was "a Malayan muck"; cf. Dryden, The Hind and the Panther, III. 1187-8:

- "Frontless, and satire-proof, he scours the streets, And runs an Indian muck at all he meets."
- 464. Had golden hopes etc. He believed that the French Revolution would bring liberty and prosperity to France and all the world. See note to 1, 265.
  - 465. those at home, the Aylmer family.
- 466. With a heaved shoulder etc. He shrugged his shoulders and smiled pertly,—signs of careless and slightly contemptuous indifference. The "saucy smile" shows his suppressed amusement at Leolin's love for Edith. ['Shrugged' is an sugly word. H. T.]
- 467. fain had haled, would have gladly hauled or dragged. Fain is an adverb here. Cf. 1. 805. Hale is an older form of haul, and occurs in The Princess, 1v. 252; Walking to the Mail, 1. 89; Boudicea, 1. 55. the world, society.
- 468. air'd him, refreshed him; taken him out of his solitude. nearer, more intimate.
- 469. Screw not etc., do not put too great a strain upon your strength of body and mind for fear it should break down under it. The metaphor is from the screwing up of the string of a musical instrument to a greater tension than it will bear. The figure is, probably a similar one in Shaks. Macbeth, I. vii. 60: "Screw your courage to the sticking-place." This line prepares as for the hint given later on (II. 715-717) that Leolin's subsequent suicide was due to temporary insanity.

- 471. From where etc. He wore the dagger, as a love-token, next his heart. worldless, unworldly, simple, honest.
- 472. Kissing his vows etc. He kissed the dagger in attestation of his true love, as a knight kisses his sword to ratify a vow that he has taken. Cf. Shaks. Rape of Lucrece, 1842, 1843:
  - "This said, he (Collatine) struck his hand upon his breast, And kiss'd the fatal knife, to end (i.e. ratify) his vow."
- 473. benchers, senior members of an Inn of Court, who are the governing body of the Society and have control over students for the bar.
- 475. heart ... helped head, his simple, unworldly nature and his love for Edith made his intellect clearer.
  - 476. far between, coming at long intervals.
- 479. Charm'd him etc., acted like a charm to guide him through all the labyrinths or perplexities of his legal studies. See ll. 435-437.
  - 480. a light, a prospect of success.
- 481. they that cast etc., explained in the kext line by the word begetters. cast, moulded; set her spirit in its mould of flesh. Cf. To J. S., 3, 4:

"Gently comes the world to those That are cast in gentle mould."

- 483. To sell her, to give her in marriage to a rich suitor. See ll. 347-349. With the scathing irony of this line compare that of l. 781. For the repetition of good, see note to l. 487.
- 484. Whatever eldest-born etc., every heir to high rank or large property that they could get hold of.
- 48% wooing him to woo. A good instance of one of the characteristics of Tennyson's style, consisting in a sort of sound-play,—the repetition of a word in the same or in a slightly different sense. This epigrammatic iteration has a peculiarly emphatic effect. Cf. 11. 59 (call'd), 67 (joy/ul), 193, 194 (fair, fairer), 232 (pleasure, please), 249, 250 (love, loved), 291 (hard-ridden, hard), 483 (good), 499 (hunters, hunted), 718 (shame). Also Guinevere, 309, 310:
  - "Whereat the novice crying, with clasp'd hands, Shame on her own garrulity garrulously."

And Queen Mary, 11. 2:

"Under colour "Under colour."

It is employed by other poets, as Milton, Par. Lost, IX. 11; "That brought into this world a world of wee; Byron, Prisoner of Chillon, VI.: "The very rock hath, rock'd;" Cowper, Task,

- IV. 399: "With all this thrift they thrive not; and Spenser, Faery Queen, 1. 2. 45:
  - "There she awhile him stayes, him selfe to rest, That to the rest more able he might bee."
  - 488. month by month. See hote to 1. 806.
- 489. distant blaze, the bright light of their dinner-lamps seen in the distance.
- 490. wirer. See note to 1. 539. Poachers use snares made of wire to entrap hares. The adjective nightly has two meanings, containing the notion of either (1) 'by night, during the night,' (as here), or (2) 'every night, night after night.'
- 491. Falter, hesitate (through fear of discovery). The word has the same derivation as fault, from Lat. fallere, to beguile.
- 492. Sullen, defiant, pitying, wroth. These epithets describe the different moods of the suitors upon their rejection.
- 494. the folly taking wings etc. the report of the foolish affair began to spread beyond the bounds of the "sleepy" (1, 45) Aylmer village, and was carried by rumour into the neighbouring districts.
- 495. down the wind, forth, away; like a bird borne along by the wind. Cf. Cowper, Progress of Error, 333 (of the "eagle-pinioned Muse"): "Down, down the wind, she swims and sails away."
- 497, 498. mockery ... laughter, i.e. a subject of mockery ... a subject of laughter. yeomen, small farmers. over ale, as they drank beer together.
  - 499. For hunters followed by hunted, see note to 1, 487.
- 500 cordon, the enclosing circle (of hunters or beaters). toward the death, with the object of killing the game.
- 503. the wealthier farms, i.c. lest she should meet or hear of Leolin there.
- 504. her own home-circle of the poor, the poor people belonging to her own village whom she visited. Cf. ll. 147, etc.; 683, etc.
- 507. amulet, magical charm, mysterious influence. Amulet is from Arabic hamala, "he carried"; hence, 'a thing carried.'
- 509. the brand of John. The tree had been branded with the letters I. R. (=John Rex or King), denoting that it had been so marked in the reign of King John. The marks thus burnt into the bark of the tree had been concealed from view by the overgrowth of fresh bark, which, falling off centuries after, had disclosed the ancient brand. A waiter in Notes and Queries (Sept. 25, 1880) tells us of a tree that was cut down in Sherwood Forest, which bore a cipher indicating Kings John's reign. The mark was eighteen melies within the tree, and a little more than a foot from the centre. Other trees cut down of the same occasion were incised or stamped with marks of the reigns of James I., sand of William and Mary. Oaks and yews attain to a great age; "William the Conqueror's Oak" in Windsor Park is known to be at least 1200 years old.

- 511 The broken base etc. [The trunk of the tree was hollow and decayed with only one branch in leaf. H.T.]
- 513. the manorial lord, the lord of the manor or estates, i.e. Sin Aylmer. In feudal times a manor was a grant, of lands from the king to a baron which carried with it the right of jurisdiction.
- 514. millennial, lit. a thousand years old; i.e. vory ancient touch-wood dust, dust or flow defed debris of decayed and rotten wood. Touch in touch-wood is a corruption of the Middle Eng. tache, tinder for receiving sparks struck by a flint.
- 515. Found .. a bitter treasure-trove, made a minful discovery. Notice the oxymoron, as in Mand, μ. 6: "faultily faultless"; The Defence of Lucknow, γι.: "the pitiful-pitless knife." (ff. Horace's (Carm. 111. λi. 35) sphendide mendax, 'nobly false'; and Sophocles's (Andg. 74) bota πανουργήσασα, 'having committed a righteous crime'; and Lancetot and Elaine, 872. 873:

"His honour rooted in dishonour stood, And faith unfaithful kept him fulsely true"

Also Shaks. Richard III. IV. iv. 26:

"Dead-life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost."

In treasure-trove, e.e. treasure found, trove (Old Fr. trove) is properly, a dissyllable.

- 516. Burst his own wyvern, broke the seal of the letter which was stamped with the Aylmer crest. See note to l. 17.
  - 517. Writhing, in a torture of indignation.
- 521. To him that fluster'd etc., to Sir Aylmer who confused and frightened the feeble-minded custic. parish wits, the low intelligence of an ordinary villager.
- 523. To play their go-between, to act as messenger between them.
- 525. Soul stricken. The common word is heart stricken, i.e. conscience-stricken;—an instance of Tennyson's avoidation of the commonplace; see General Introduction, II. (2), (d).
- 526. lean heart, moanness, cowardice. Miserable qualifies heart.
  - 527. a despot dream, a dream of the performance of some act of tyranny. Hence he is described as "panting," when he woke, with excitement and passion caused by the dream.

529. the black republic, the flock of rooks which had their nests on the elin-trees of his park. Similarly in The Brook, 127, pigeous are described as "in session on the roofs," as though assembled in-parliament. Cf. Pope, Essay on Man, iii. 183, 184:

"Learn each small People's genius, policies, The Ant's republic, and the realm of Bres."

- 5.3. Sweeping the frothly from the fescue. The Froth-fly (also called Froth-worm and Frog-fly) is a small insect which in its larva state is found on plants, enveloped in a frothy, saliva-like liquid. The fescue (Festuca) is the name of a very extensive genus of grasses. The one mentioned here is the Moadow Fescue (Festuca frateusis), a valuable parture grass. Sir Aylmer's feet passing through the long grass, brushed those frothy formations from its leaves.
- 532, 533. who made A downward crescent etc. Her mouth formed a curve like a crescent moon with its horns pointing downwards. reinion is from the French mignon, neat, spruce. The word is used with a touch of scorn.
- 534. Listless in all despondence, indifferent in her feeling of complete inability to do anything to help matters.
- 535. As if the living passion etc. Sir Aylmer tore the loveletter as vindictively as if it were not merely a record of strong and living affection but an actual living object which could feel his rough usage.
- 537 at his own great self defied, at the defiance of his own great self: a Latin construction like post urbem conditam, 'after the sounding of the city.' Cf. Milton's "after summons read" (Par. Lost, 1. 797). Cf. II. 375, 776.
- 538. striking-on ... scorn. His reading was interrupted by expressions he met with which excited his utmost impatience and contempt.
- 539. babyisms, childish talk such as lovers use. The word, in this sense, like sallowy (l. 147), wirer (l. 490), idioted (l. 590), seems to be of Tennyson's coinage. See General Introduction, II. (2), (d). dear diminutives, diminutives expressive of endearment; short pet names. Cf. the "little language" of Swift in his letters to Stella.
- 541 like a chidden child. Cf. Shelley, Stantas Written in Dejection, IV.:

"Yet now despair itself is mild, Even as the winds and waters are; I could lie down like a tired child."

- 542. hush'd itself, i.e. Leolin, after complaining of Edith's silence, at last stopped writing to her.
- 547. rustling etc., moving about among the shrubs and bushes near the Hall, and so making a rustling noise, which caught the ear of the keeper.
- 548. a keeper, a game-keeper, who thought Leolin was a poacher.
  - 549. nor was it well for her, she too had not a happy time of it.
- 556. what possess'd him, what strange influence made han do it. It seemed to himself a sort of infatuation.
  - 558. follow'd suit, followed her husband's example.
- 559. Seem'd hope's returning rose. Her father's kiss, repeated ("seconded") as it was by hen mother, made the prospect of things seem more hopeful to her. 'Rose-coloured' is a common synonym for 'hopeful, cheering.'
- 560. A Martin's summer, a second or autumnal period of summer weather coming just before winter. Mild weather often returns in England for a time near Martinmas or St. Martin's Day, the 11th of November. Cf. Shaks., 1 King Henry VI. I. ii. 131: "Expect St. Martin's summer, halcyon days." Shakspere also calls it "All Hallown (i.e. All Saints', 1st Nov.) summer "in I King Henry IV. I. ii. 177: "Farewell, thou latter spring! farewell, All-hallown summer!" Hence the line means 'A temporary revival of his lost affection.'
- 561. ordeal by kindness. She was tested by kind treatment, to see if she would yield to that. In old times there were several kinds of ordeals or tests to find out the guilt or innocence of accused persons; as the ordeal by wager of battle between the accused and his accuser, and the ordeal by water, often applied to supposed witches, who, if they sank, were accounted innocent, and if they floated, guilty.
  - 562. crost, met, came across.
  - 563. flow'd in, gave vent to. Cf. To J. S. 5-7:
    - "And me this knowledge bolder made, Or else I had not dared to flow

In these words toward you."

shallower acrimonies, bitter speeches of a more superficial character; petty taunts.

- 566. Her charitable use, her customary works of charity. See 1. 504.
- 567. stience, i.e. on the part of Leolin, whose letters had ceased.
  - 569, some low fever etc. The fever is personified as if it were an invader on the look out for a weak point in the defences of a place, by which to make an attack upon it.

570. a people or a house, a community or a family.

571, 572. Like files hurting the hurt. Cf. Bacon, Essays, XIII.: "Such men in other men's calamities, are, as it were, in season, and are ever on the loading part (i.e. they 'hurt the hurt'); not so good as the dogs that licked Lazarus' sores, but like flies that are still buzzing upon anything that is raw." Deer, when one of their number is sick or disabled, eject him from the herd. Cf. Shaks. As You Like It, II. i. 50 (of a wounded deer): "Left and abandoned of his velvet friends."

574. And flung etc., i.e. she had to take to her bed with a violent attack of fever.

577. past, passed away, died; the Aylmer family becoming extinct with her, its last representative.

578-580. Star to star ... as at once, one star sends waves of light to another star, however distant; so may not one soul communicate with another soul by means of some power or quality that it possesses still more delicate and impalpable than light; and so one soul, though far di. ant from the other, feel its sudden sympathetic touch? A similar instance of this supernatural sympathy or telepathy, as it is called, occurs in Enoch Arden, 609-611, where Enoch in his distant island hears the bells ringing for Philip's marriage with his wife Annie. Similarly Charlotte Bronte (Jane Eyre, Chaps. 35 and 37) represents her heroine as hearing, though far away, the wild cry of "Jane! Jane! Jane!" uttered by her lover, Mr. Rochester. Cf. Demeter and Persephone, 87-89:

"Last as the likeness of a dying man,

. Without his knowledge, from him flits to warn

A far-off friendship (i.e. friend) that he comes no more."

582. keen, piercing. The shriek, of course, comes from Leolin's lips.

583. Shrill, sounded shrilly. Shrill, used as a verb, is a favourite word with Tennyson; cf. Enoch Arden, 175: "hammer and axe, auger and saw... shrill'd and rang"; Passing of Arthur, 34; Sir Calahad, 5; The Talking Oak, 68; Demeter and Persephone, 60. For the rhythmic break, cf. General Introduction, II. (2) (e), (a), and Passing of Arthur, 41, 42:

"From cloud to cloud, down the long wind the dream Shrill'd."

• 585. With a weird bright eye, with a weirdly bright eye; with a strange, unearthly light in his eyes. The line should be scanned:

With a weird | bright eye, | sweating | and trem | b(e)ling.

By this scansion trembling is pronounced as a trisyllable, as with warblings in Sir Lancelot and Queen Guinevere, 34:

"By night | to ecfry warb|(e)lings."

And Cowper, Catterina, 12:

"By the night ingale warb (e)ling nigh."

The usage is common in Shakspere; cf. Two Gentlemen of Verona, I. iii. 84:

"O, how | this spring | of love | resem | b(e)leth," and Coriolanus, I. i. 159:

"You, the | great toe | of this | assem | b(e)ly.

See Abbott's Shakes. Grammar, § 477.

- 586. creaking into flames, starting up on end, like the flames of a briskly burning fire.
- 588. his long arms, his extended arms. So, Martial, Epp. vii. 20, has longa dextra, 'with right arm stretched to its full extent.'
- 590. befool'd and idioted etc., called a fool and an idiot by the other in bluff friendliness. See note to 1. 539.
- 594. A breaker a revealer. Break, in this sense, is always used of news or information that requires care or delicacy in the telling.
- 595. edged with death, black-edged. "Mourning note paper," here used to convey to Leolin the news of Edith's death, has a black border round it.
- 596. him, the dead man, Leolin. himself, the Indian kinsman.
- 597. with no bandit's, not with a bandit's blood (see Il. 225-231) as It had been before, but with the true and noble-hearted Leolin's. Bandit (Ital. bandito) is properly one who is banned or outlawed.
- 599. his death, his dead body. Cf. life for living thing, Enoch Arden, 75; birth for thing born, Wordsworth, Immortality Ode, 11.7
- 600. his flock, his congregation, his parishioners. See l. 361 and note.
- 601. the years which are not Time's, i.e. he was aged not by the lapse of time, but by grief at Leolin's fate. Of Ryron's Prisoner of Chillon, whose "hair was gray, but not with years."
- 602. many thousand days etc. His life was shortened by several years through the terrible shock.
  - 604. the second death, i.e. the death of Leolin. The recent death of Edith made Leolin's death affect her but little, else she, being one of the indirect agents that caused it, would have hesitated to ask his brother to preach her daughter's funeral sermon.

57

- 606. to find etc., to suggest texts or portions of Scripture to Averil for him to use as the mottoes of his sermons. It is implied that she had given Averill the text he preached from.
- 607. harrow'd, distressed, wrang with grief.
- 699. Darkly that day rose etc., [a day without sun, the only faint resemblance of sunshine being the bright yellow of the faded autumn leaves, H. T.]
- 615. Ramlets. Hamlet is the old ham, home, with the double diminutive suffix -let.
- 617. widely murmurd, talked of with disapproval all over the district.
- 618. Their own gray tower etc. The church-people of the neighbouring villages left their own churches, and the Nonconformists left their own bapels, to come and hear Averill's sermon. The former, as being more in sympathy with the bereaved man and Editb (who were church-people) and knowing them better, wore full mourning; the latter had only some bit of black about them as a token of their sorrow. plain-faced tabernacle, homely, unadorned place of worship (as opposed to the more ornamental Church). Tabernacle is the name given to the building used by the Jews for worship in their desert journey; and hence is applied to (Nonconformist) places of worship generally.
- 621. one night, a universal blackness; being draped all over the interior with black velvet hangings, as is customary at the funeral service of a person of importance.
- 622. greenish glimmerings. [greenish glass of the lancet-windows. H. T.] lancets, lancet-windows; high and narrow windows pointed like a lancet. They are a marked characteristic of the early English style of Gothic architecture.
  - 623. tower'd, i.e. in the pulpit of the church.
- 624. with his hopes in either grave. With the deaths of Leolin and Edith, all his hopes of the future were gone.
- 625. Long o'er his bent brows etc. A clergyman, on entering the puspit to preach, bends his head in a silent, preliminary prayer. Averill prayed thus with his hand over his face for so long at time that it seemed as if his face were attracted by some magnetic power to his hand, from which at last, ashy-pale, he withdrew it.

- 627, 628. labour'd three His brief prayer-prelude, said with difficulty the short opening prayer.
- 628. gave the verse, reack out the verse of the Bible as the text of his sermon.
- 629, 630. 'Behold etc. See Bible, Matthew, xxiii. 38. The words are uttered by Christ in his lament over Jerusalem, and prophesy the approaching destruction of her temple and her capture and desolation by the Romans.
- 632. from his height etc. The greatness and loneliness of his grief gave force and passion to his words, as a stream gains impetus by falling from a height.
- 633. Bore down in flood etc., gave free vent to his pent-up feelings, and indignantly denounced the mischief and ruin that is wrought in the world. A similar metaphor occurs in ll. 115, 116.
- 635. Never since etc., i.e. never since the Deluge, when for their sins, all mankind were drowned except eight persons, viz., Noah and his wife and his threesons with their wives. See Bible, Genesis, vi., vii. our bad earth. Bad is emphatic here—four earth on account of its badness.
- 636. rolling o'er the palaces of the proud. Cf. Milton's (Par. Lost, XI. 747-749) description of the Defuge:

"All dwellings else Flood overwhelm'd, and them with all their pomp Deep under water roll'd."

- 639. When since etc. This is a rhetorical question, the understood answer to which is 'Never.' Hence it is equivalent to the 'Never since' of 1. 634. which it replaces. Cf. "has often" followed by "how often," ll. 699, 700, below.
- 640-643. the idolatries .. in the Highest? The idolatrous practices, which (whether as the worship of images or of man's own lusts) in consequence of men's low and unenlightened ideas about religion, exalted their false objects of devotion to the place of the Deity, and in professing to worship Him worshipped only their own errors and vices. "The Highest" is several times used in the Bible as a synonym for God. See Psadms, xviii. 13, etc. shot up etc. In a cloudy sunset, shafts of shadow are often shot up into the zenith.
- 644-646. 'Gash thyself... thy God. In the earlier times when coarse idolatry, such as that of Baal, was prevalent, the priests cut themselves with knives in honour of their god, and in their penances worshipped the worst qualities of their own nature, since they attributed those worst qualities to their deity. See Bible, 1 Kings. xviii. 28, where the priests of Baal are said to "cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets till the blood gushed out upon them." Baal, meaning lord, master, was the principal male deity of the Phonicians.

59

647-649. Then came a Lord.. theorose. Christianity then took the place of pagan idolatry, and men pictured to themselves the dawn of a milder and happier epoch. Cf. the description of the peaceful kingdom of Christ' in Bible, Isaiah, xi. 6: "The calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them." And ib. xxxv. 1: "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose."

650. Crown thyself etc. Weak and miserable man now glorifies hinself, and worships, instead of Baul, his own low desires and pleasures. For worm applied to man, cf. Bible, Job, xxv. 6: "Man, that is a worm."

651. blockish God of acreage, Art allusion to the Roman god Terminus, who presided over the boundaries of estates, and was represented without arms or feet. Acreage, collection of acres; landed estates; cf. fooverage, 1.203. Tennyson has also fruitage, yarlandage, scaffoldage, suckage, achage, rummage.

653. Thy God is far diffused etc., instead of an individual idol, man now worships a wide-spread deity in the shape of parks and mansions and money and titles and pedigrees.

655. Itving gold, gold that seems alive, because, being put out to interest, it keeps growing and increasing in amount. The living principle in money is that it can of itself reproduce money. The simple-hearted Edmund in The Brook (1. 7) thought money "a dead thing."

656. title-scrolls, [title-deeds. H. T.] gorgeous heraldmes splendid coats of arms.

659. Thou wilt not gash etc., you practise no self-mortification in the worship of this god.

659. Fares richly etc., like the worldly rich man in Christ's parable who "was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day" (Bible, Luke, xvi. 19).

659, 660. not a hair Ruffled upon the scarfskin, you are so softly and delicately clad that not even a hair of your skin is discomposed. Scarfskin is the epidermis or outer surface skin.

661, 662. The deathless ruler ... cannot die, the immortal soul that directs and controls you mortal body is corrupted by your sensuality, and so doomed to eternal damnation. The representation of the human body as the house or mansion of the soul is common in literature; cf. Shaks. **Rempest*, I. ii. 457-459, where Miranda says of Ferdinand;

"There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple;
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't."

And The Promise of May, 11. :

"O this mortal house, Which we are boin into, is haunted by The ghosts of the dead passions of dead men."

Again, St. Agnes' Eve, 19:

" So in mine earthly house I am."

Cf. also Tennyson's poem, The Deserted House, meaning the dead body.

663. thou numberest, thou art numbered; you profess to be a follower of Christ.

664. "Leave all and follow me." Christ's words to the rich young man were "Sell all that thou hast, and distribute anto the poor, ... and come, follow me." And Poter says to Christ afterwards, "Co, we have left all and followed thee." See Bible, Luke, xvii. 22, 28.

665. with His light about thy feet, with the knowledge of Jesus Christ to guide your steps. The old Baal-worshippers had not your culightenment and are therefore more excusable than you.

666. with His message etc., familiar as you are with ('hrist's command to His followers to lead unworldly lives.

667. thy brother man, i.e. the incarnate Christ. Cf. Bible, Hebrews, ii. 17: "Wherefore in all things it behaved him (i.e Jesus) to be made like unto his brethren" (i.e. mankind).

669. Born of etc. Christ's mother, the Virgin Mary, belonged to the village of Nazareth. His reputed father, Joseph, was a corporter. See Bible, Luke, i. 20, 27; Matthew, xiii. 55.

669. Wonderful etc. Cf. Bible, Isaiah, ix. 6: "His (i.e. the promised Messiah's) name shall be called Wonderful, Counselfor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace"

670. the two, i.e. the worshippers of Baal and the worshippers of their own lusts. Cf. Bible, Colorians, iii. 5: "Covetousness, the which is idolatry."

671, 672. passing through the fire Bodies. As was done in the worship of Moloch Cf. Bible, Jeremiah, xxxii. 35: "They built the high places of Baal, . . to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Moloch"; and Milton, Par. Lost, I. 392-6:

"First Moloch, horrid king, besmear'd with blood Of haman sacrifice, and parents' tears'; Though for the noise of drugs and timbrels loud Their children's cries unheard, that past through fire To his grim idol."

872-674. thro' the smoke, The blight ... likeness. Blight is to be taken in apposition with smoke. The passage means that the modern worldling is crueller than the old Moloch-worshipper because, while the latter burnt the bodies, the former destroys the souls of his children by subjecting them to the corrupting influence of mean aims and ambitions, and so makes his children as deprayed as himself.

61

675. Thy better born etc., one of a higher nature than you, who is unhappy in being the child of such a parent as you are.

66. grow straight and fair—, grow up to be high-principled and pure-hearted. Observe the aposiopesis. Words like "You know what would be such a child's late from what has happened to Edith," are implied.

677. I was bid. See 11. 607, 608.

- 679. Fairer than Rachel etc. See Bible, Genesis, xxix. 1-10, where the first meeting of Jacob and Rachel at the well of Haran is described. palmy well, well surrounded with palmtrees.
- 680. Fairer than Ruth etc. See Bible, Ruth, ii. 2-17, for the story of Ruth's gleaning corn in the fields of Boaz. Cf. Hood, Ruth:

"She stood breast-high amid the corn, Clasp'd with the golden light of morn," etc.

- 681. Fair as the Angel etc. See Bible, Luke, i. 28: "And the angel (Gabriel) came in unto her (Mary), and said, Hail, thou that art highly-favoured, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women."
- 683. For so mine own etc. As the angelic presence filled Mary's house with divine radiance, so Edith's coming lighted up our homes with joy. For = I say "sudden light," for such was the effect upon my own house.
- 684. that beam of Heaven, the welcome, blessed presence of Edith.
  - 687. child of shame, illegitimate child.
- 688. The common care etc. A version of the well-known saying, "Whom every one cares for no one cares for." A child who has no special claim upon any one's care gets little or no care bestowed upon him.
- 689-691. wasting his forgotten heart ... In gambols, giving vent to his neglected feelings of affection in play with Edith, as though she were his mother. See I. 109 and note.
- 692. Had such a star of morning etc., there was such a gentle and cheering look in her blue eyes. So Tannyson (Dream of Fair Women, 91) has "The star-like sorrows of immortal eyes" for the calm and gentle looks of sorrow in them.

- 693. all neglected places etc., all those who were lonely and uncared for by their fellow-men were instinctively filled with joy at the sight of her. Cf. Bible, Isaiah, ln. 9: 'Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem.'
  - 695. Low was her voice. (f. Shaks. King Lear, v. iri. 272-3:

"Her (Cordelia's) voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman."

- 695 697. won mysterious way. silence. It was strange how nearly deaf persons, to whom a loud voice was almost inaudible, could hear her soft accents.
- 697. free of alms, liberal in giving alms. Alms, a contraction of the old trisyllabic almesse (from Latin electrosyna) is properly singular.
  - 698. The hand etc. See above, f. 151, etc.
- 701. laid . smooth, smoothed and arranged his pillow when he was ill of fever. Tennyson uses fiverous, rather than the weaker form fiverish, in Enoch Arden, 230. The word occurs four times in Shakspere
- 703. burthen. Tennyson prefers this, the older, spelling to the commoner burden. See also 1. 612.
  - 704. spiritual doubt, religious difficulty or perplexity.
- 705. when some heat etc., when a dispute broke out between you.
- 706. glide between your wraths etc, interpose between you when you were angry, and gently and quietly put a stop to the quarrel.
  - 707. walk'd, led her life.
- 708. Wearing the light yoke etc., i.e. she was a disciple of the loving Josus, whose mission was one of peace. (f. Bible, Matthew, xi. 29, 30: "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart For my yoke (i.e. service) is easy."
- 709. Who still'd etc. When Christ and his disciples were crossing the Sea of Galilee, a great storm beat upon the boat, and they appealed to Him for help. Whereupon He "arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm." See Bible, Matthew, viii. 23-27. The Sea of Galilee or Lake of Tiberian lies to the north east of Palestine.
  - 710. one. i.e. Leolin.
- 712. he was worthy love, he deserved to be loved. Love is to be parsed as in the adverbial objective case, after worthy, denoting value.
  - 715-717. this frail bark ... captain's knowledge, in an extremity of suffering, weak men may put an end to their lives without being guilty of self-murder, and even without knowing what they were doing. He suggests that his brother committed suicide in a moment of frenzy. The "pilot" and the "captain" represent the conscious self of the man (the "frail bark").

717. hope with me, share my hope that Leolin was not responsible for his deed.

718. went hence with shame, died a shameful death. For the repetition of shame, see note to b 487.

7 Nor mine the fault, and I am not to be blamed.

720. Acant chairs, chairs in which the loved one will no longer sit. Cf. Longfellow, Resignation, 3, 4:

"There is no fireside, howsoe'er defended, But has one vacant chair!"

And In Memoriam, xx:

"To see the vacant chair, and think How good! how kind! and he is gone."

Also To J. S. 22, 23:

"'I wo years his chair is seen Empty before us."

widow d walls, house bereft of the loved inmates. Tennyson uses widow'd (for bereft) of "a dying king, Laid widow'd of the power in his eye" in Morte d'Arthur, 122, and of his heart in In Memoriam, LXXXV. So "widow'd hour" for 'hour of bereavement.' ib. XL.

723. Sons of the glebe, farm labourers, rustics; Lat. adscriptiglebæ, those attached to the soil. The usual phrase is "sons of the soil"; in his avoidance of the commonplace, Tennyson substitutes glebe for soil; see Goneral Introduction II. (2), (d). Glebe is the Lat. gleba, a clod of earth. Ordinarily the word meuns land belonging to a parish church or to an acclesiastical benefice. With other frowns etc., i.e. their frowns were frowns of anger, and not such as those which contract the brow in the glare of sunshine.

724. for summer shadow, to shelter their eyes from the sun.

725. it seem'd, it seemed to himself.

726. No pale sheet-lightnings etc., when he saw that the preacher was not expressing mere general regret at what had happened, but was making a bitter personal attack upon him. Polemic bratory is often compared to thunder or lightning; cf. Milton, Par. Regained, IV. 270, 271, of the Athenian orators, who

"Fulmin'd over Greece To Macedon, and Artaxerxes' throne."

And Aristophanes, Acharnians, 531, of Pericles: ήστραπτ', έβρόντα, ξυνεκύκα την Έλλάδα, "ha lightered, he thundered, he threw Greece into a ferment."

- 728. Sat anger-charm'd from sorrow. His anger acted as a speil upon hum to prevent any indication of grief. soldier-like, holding his head high.
- 729. when the preacher's etc., when the tones of the preacher's voice softened as he described, one after another, the amiable qualities of Edith.
- 732. twitch. convulsive movement, indicative of emotion. iron, rigid, inflexible. For Tennyson's metaphorical use of this word, cf. A Dream of Fair (Vomen, 106: "iron years"), Maud, Part I., XVIII. iv.: "iron skies"; In Memorium, XC.: "an iron welcome."
  - 733. hold up, retain his firmness.
- 734. I shall shame etc., i.e. by losing my self-tontrol and giving vent to my feelings.
- 738. O thou that killest etc. The passage is adapted from Christ's reproachful lament over Jerusalem (see note to 1. 629), Bible, Mathew, xxiii. 37: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee!" And Luke, xiv. 42: "If thou hadst known, ... the things which belong unto thy peace!" The preacher applies Christ's reproach against the prophet-killing Jerusalem to Sir Aylmor's conduct towards his daughter—"Would that you, who have caused your daughter's death, had understood what was conducive to your own happiness and ours!"
- 741. Is there no trophet etc. Christ in the words quoted above refers to the Hebrew prophets, such as Zechariah, who was stoned at the commandment of King Joash for denouncing his idolatry (3 ('hronicles, xxiv. 19-22), and John the Baptist, who preached in the wilderness of Judea, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matthew, iii. 2). But, Averill says, there are other prophets besides these; our own children, who are better Christians than ourselves and who, by their lives and emduct, call us from sin to godliness, are prophets and teachers to us.
- 743. On the narrow way, leading a Christian life. The reserve is to Bible, Matthew, vii. 13, 14: "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction.. Nurrow is the way which leadeth unto life."
- 745. "Come up hither." Cf. Bible, Revelution, xi. 12: "And they (the two witnesses for God) heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither."
- 746. Is there no stoning etc., i.e. Edith and Leolin, though not actually stoned (as Zeohariah was), have been killed by the harsh treatment they received.

- 748. No desolation etc., i.e. our homes have been desolated, not by sword and fire (as Jerusalem was), but by the loss of our loved ones, caused by human wilfulness and cruelty.
- 750. darker, earthlies. The loss of my brother has cast a gloom over my life and made me feel hard and unspiritual.
- 751. he is past your prayers, he is dead and therefore you cannot pray for him. Prayers for the dead are not recognised in the English Church.
- 752. Not past etc., but he is not beyond the reach of God's abulant mercy.
  - 753. long-suffering, patient under wrong.
- 754. '6 poor in spirit," humble-minded. Cf. Bible, Matthew, v. 3, where Christ says, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."
- 755. Have twisted back etc., men nowadays have become so haughty and self-opinionated, that the term "poor in spirit" has suffered a reaction in its meaning, and "poor-spirited" is now used in the sense of weak and cowardly. Similarly silly once meant "blessed"; and simple, "plain, artless," has gained the sense of "foolish." Cf. the Greek word eighths, properly "good-flatured, guileless," and then "silly." For the expression in the text, cf. Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, 235, 236:
  - "Remember how the course of Time will swerve, Crook and turn upon itself in many a backward streaming curve."

And Palace of Art, 257:

- "Back on herself her serpent pride had curl'd."
- 758. To blow etc., to publish and denounce everywhere the cruel deaths of Edith and Leolin, who were sacrificed to the pride of Sir Aylmer. Cf. Shaks. Macbeth, 1. vii. 21-24:
  - "Pity, like a naked new-born babe,
    Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, horsed
    Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye."
- 759. Sent like etc. Cf. Bible, Judges, xix. 29. A Levite, whose concubine had been outraged by the men of Gibeah, divided her dead body into twel pieces and sent them to all the tribes of Israel as a summons to avenge the wrong.
- 760. Out youder, i.e. in France. See note to 1. 265. earth Lightens etc. The innate wickedness of the world (which is compared to the earth's central fires) is bursting out into a blaze in France.
  - 762. The red fruit etc., the bloodshed resulting from a former Baal-worship (see II. 650 etc., 670 etc.). The meaning is that the murder of the French nobility by the Revolutionists is the outcome of the former's previous luxury and greed, wno "worshipped thair own lusts."

763. The heads etc. In 1793, during the Reign of Terror, the guillotine was daily at work in Paris and other French cities. King Louis XVI. was beheaded on 21st January; Philip, Duke of Orleans, on 8th November.

764. They cling together etc. [He alludes to a report, more horrible than credible, that, when the heads were taken of of the sack, two were sometimes found olinging together, on having bitten into the other in the momentary convulsion that followed decapitation. H. T. ]

765. shambles, a slaughter-house; litt butchers' stalls, from M. E. schamel, a bench, Lat. scabellum, a foot-steel. naked marriages etc., naked men and women, fled to each other, are hurled from the bridges over the Loire. After the defeat of the insurrection in La Vendee, in the forth-west of France, Corrier, the republican representative at Nantes, ordered numerous prisoners, tied up in sacks, to be thrown into the river Loire. These executions were called Noyades, or Drownings, and at first took place at night. But "by degrees, daylight itself witnessed Noyades: women and men are tied together, feet and feet, hands and hands; and flung in: this they call Mariage Republican, Republican Marriage Dumb, out of suffering now, as pale swoln corpses, the victims tumble confusedly seaward along the Loire stream; the tide rolling them back: clouds of ravens darken the river; wolves prowl on the shoal-places" (Carlyle's French Revolution).

766. ever-murder'd, suffering under continual executions and massagres.

767. shores that darken etc., the packs of wolves that collect to feed on the corpses, form dark patches on the banks of the rivers. See note to 1. 764. For darken, cf. (Foldsmith, Descried Village, 401, 402:

"Downward they move, a melancholy band, Pass from the shore and darkon all the strand."

768. the sick sea. By the Pathetic Fallacy, the sea is represented as sick or disgusted at the blood which the rivers carry down to it.

769. Is this a time etc. This is not a fit time, when the lower orders in France are turning in wild rage upon the aristocracy, for me to add to the excitement by denouncing the crime of an English aristocrat.

770. Was this a time etc. - With the dreadful example of the French aristocracy before their eyes, surely this was not a fit time for the Aylmers to display their arrogance.

NOTES. 67

771. Pharaon's darkness, i.e. a thick and palpable darkness, such as that which constituted the ninth plague of Egypt. See Bible, Exodus, x. 21-23. folds, enfolding darkness.

772. Which hid the Holiest etc., which, at the Crucifixion, hid Christ from the people's gaze shortly before He died. See Bible, Matthew, xxvii. 45, etc.

774. our narrow world etc., our small community cannot help discussing it. canvass, lit. 'to sift through canvas'; Gk. κάνναβτα Late cannabis, hemp.

776. their own desire accomplish'd, the accomplishment of their own desire; a Latin construction, cf. l. 537 and note.

777. Their own gray hairs etc., bring their aged lives to a sorrowful close. Cf. Bible, Genesis, xlii. 38, where Jacob, when asked to part with Benjamin, says "Then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave."

778, 779. broke the bond ... times to come, succeeded in severing the connexion between Edith and Leolin, whose marriage would have perpetuated the Aylmer family. For bond, cf. l. 425.

• 780. wove coarse websetc., devised low and vulgar schemes to beguile their innocent daughter. The allusion is to the parents' attempts to "sell her for her good," related above, 11. 484, etc.

781. Grossly, in unseemly fashion, without delicacy. dear daughter's good. Observe the bitter from of the expressions "dear" and "good" here, and cf. Il. 403, 848. Good, i.c. good according to their notions, but really harm

782. knew not what they did. Adapted from Christ's prayer for His crucifiers, Bible, Luke, xxiii. 34: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

785. left them bare, have they not forfeited our love and reverence?

786. take their heritage, i.e. a stranger will be their heir. Cf. 1779

788. one stone etc. Their home will be rendered utterly desolate. The prophecy was literally fulfilled, since "the great Hall was wholly broken down" (1.846). Cf. Bible, Mark, xiii. 2, where Christ, foretelling the destruction of the Temple, says: "There shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down."

• 793. ere His agony, shortly before the time of His anguish of spirit in the garden of Gethsemane.

794. Not by the temple but the gold. Of Bible, Matthew, xxiii 16: "Woe wito you, ye blind guides, which say, whosoever shall swear by the temple it is nothing; but whosever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor!"—a passage in which Christ condemns the sphistical distinctions of the Scribes and Pharisees between valid and invalid oaths. The Aylmers are compared to these quibbling, self-deluding Pharisecs, in their narrow, mistaken views of duty.

795. Their own traditions God. •Cf. Bible, Mark, vii. 13, where Christ condemns the Pharisces for "making the word of God of none effect through your tradition." Similarly the Aylmers made an idol of their family pride.

796. a world's curse, executed by mankind. Cf. Bible is aich, lxv. 15: "Ye (the unfaithful Jews) shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen."

797. "How like a heavy dull refrain of prophetic grief and indignation recurs the dreadful text, 'Your house is left unto you desolate!'" (Van Dyke's Poetry of Tonnyson.)

798. brook'd, could not endure; Old Eng. brúcan, to use, enjoy.

799. her heart etc., her feelings had been stirred and gave her no rest. remorselessly, unsparingly, unremittingly.

800. crampt-up, stifled, kept from outward manifestation, for fear she should "shame herself and him" (l. 734).

801. unresisting, listless, compliant; especially in not having dared to oppose her husband in regard to Edith. See II. 28-30.

802. their eyes, the looks of the congregation.

803. the curtains of their seat. The squire of an English country parish has, of had in old times, a special pew, of large dimensions, often provided with curtains which run round the top of the sides. The old coloured curtains had been replaced by black ones in sign of mourning, and Lady Aylmer had taken care that these should be of the best velvet.

804. of the costliest, i.e. of the costliest kind. Cf. "When the room was at its fullest," where state is understood.

805. fain had she, she would have gladly. Cf. l. 467 and note.

807. inch by inch. The repetition of an action was denoted in Old English by repeating the adverbial phrase, as by inch, by inch; then the first by was omitted, and so we get inch by inch.

808. Wifelike, with the craving for symmathy and support characteristic of a wife. he veil etc. The gesture showed that his feelings were overcoming him.

812. nave, the middle or body of a church. From Lat. navem, accusative of navis, a ship, the early Christian Church being often likened to a ship tossed by waves.

NOTES. 69

- 814. Seam'd, wrinkled. shallow, trivial, petty.
- 815. Lord of all the landscape. Cf. 1. 21 and note. Landscape, formerly landskip, contains the Dutch suffix -schap = Eng.-ship, as in friendship.
  - 816. last, furthest, most distant.
- 818. the middle aisle, the middle of the aisle,—a Latinism, like media urbs, the middle city, i.e. the middle of the city. Aisle, a passage in a church, is from Lat. ala, a wing.
- 220. to his death, to the slaughter-house, where he was to be killed.
- 823. finials, the carved ornamental work on the top of the pointed ends of the pews, with which they are finished off (Lat. finishing, terminal).
- 824. Iyongate, or tich-quie, compactate, more Middle Eng. lich, a body, a corpse; a churchyard gate with a porch, under which, at a funeral, the bier was rested while the introductory part of the burial service was read. The word occurs in lich-wake, the wake or watch held over a corpse, and in the name of the English city, Lichfield.
  - 825. porch, i.e. the porch or entrance of the church.
- 826. the gate, i.e. the lychgate, which led through the church-yard or burial-ground to the church itself.
- 827. Save under pall with bearers, except in their coffins. The coffin is covered with a black cloth or pall, which is held in the funeral procession of a great person, by pall-bearers. Cf. Wellington Ode, 6: "Warriors carry the warrior's pall."
- .829. went to seek her child, followed her child to the grave; died.
- 831. the change and not the change, the change in his life caused by the loss of his wife and child, unaccompanied by any change in his material surroundings. The oxymoron is like the Gk. μήτηρ dμήτωρ, 'a mother that is no mother' (Sophocles, Electra, 1154). Cf. "faith unfaithful" and "falsely true" (Lancelot and Elaine, 872), "born-unborn" (Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, 98), and note to 1.515.
  - 832. those fixt eyes etc. Cf. The Day-Dream, 43, 44:
    - "Those old portraits of old kings, That watch the sleepers from the wall."
- 835. Began to droop, so fall, he grew feeble in body and mind.
- 837. Dead, i.e. mentally dead. As far as his intellect was concerned, he was dead two years before his actual death.

- 839. His keepers, his attendants who took care of him. He escaped them by dying.
  - 840. the narrow gloom, the darkness of the narrow grave.
  - 84]. wanted, was without. at his end, cat his funeral.
- 842. The dark retinue etc., the procession of mourners that attend the funeral of a rich man merely out of respect for his wealth and station. Dark means 'wearing black clothes' in sign of mourning. Retinue is accented on the second, instead of the first syllable, as in The Princess, Et. 179:
- "Went forth | in long | reti|nue foll|owing up And Guinevere, 396:
- "Of his | and her | reti|nue mov|ing they."

  Milton and Shakspere always accept the word in this way.
  - 844. a vanish'd race, the extinction of his family.
- 845. the violet etc. [Some one strewed violets on the grave of Nero. H. T.]
  - 847, parcell'd, divided, distributed.
  - 848. their daughter's good. See notes to ll. 483, 781.
- 849. the hawk's cast, feathers, fur, or other indigestible matters ejected from the stomach by a hawk after he has devoured his prey. his run, the burrow or tunnel excavated by the mole, a small quadruped, which leads a subterranean life, feeding chiefly on earth-worms. mole is a curtailed form of the older moldwarp, mould-thrower.
- 850. hedgehog, a small, prickly-backed, insectivorous quadruped, which makes a hole or nest for itself six or eight inches deep. plantain, a common weed, with broad, strong leaves.
  - 851. fondles, by passing his fore-paws over it.
- 852. stow-worm (or blind-worm), a reptile that feeds on earthworms, insects, etc., [properly slay-worm. It was believed to be venomous. H. T.] weasel, a small animal with a thin, long body. It feeds on mice, rats, moles, and small birds.
- 853. The lines 849-853 admirably picture the complete desolation that marks the site of the "great Hall." It has become the familiar haunt and home of timid wild animals that shun any trace of human habitation.

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

[The references are to the lines. Italies denote subjects.]

A

Absolute clauses, 108, 227, 339.
Abstract for concrete, 177 599.
According hearts, 453.
Acreage, 651.
Acrinonies, 563.
Adulteries, 376.
Aghast, 330.
Alliterative compounds, 168, 256.
Allow (= approve), 120.
Allowance, 410.
Annulet, 507.
Anger charm'd, 728.
Apostopicsus, 676.
Aylmer Aylmer, 13
Aylmerisin, 123.

В

Bal, 644, 650, 665, 671. Babyisms, 539? Bandit, 597. Bar, 118, 134. Baths, The, 27, 205. Beam'd their begt, 69, 227. Bedfidden, 178. Beeswing, 406. Beetling, 229. Befool'd, 590. Benchers, 473

Beut, 445. Bine, 113. Bun, 405. Black republic, 529. Blight, 672. Blockish God, 651. Blossom ball, 87. Blues and reds, 251. Border mairiage, 263. Bottom, 254. Bountcously made, 74. Brand of John, 509. Breathing while, 449. Breaker, 594. Bustle up (of hair), 42. Broken ring, 135. Brooding shelter, 138. Brook'd, 798. Brother man, 667. Burr, 113. Burthen, 703.

C

Call'd to the bar, 59.
Canvass, 774.
Cast, 481.
Caucasians, 348.
Chancellor, 397.
Charge and not the change, 831.
Charier, 448.

Chestnut.
Child of shame, 687.
Childly way, A, 181.
Coarse webs, 780.
Coined words, 539.
Common care, 688.
Cordon, 500.
Costly Sahib, 233.
Counter, 282.
County God, 14.
Crackling into flames, 586.
Cramp'd-up, 800.
Cross-lightnings, 129.

D

Daisy-chain; 87. Darken, 767. Daughters of God, 45. Dear diminutives, 539. Decad, 82, 442. Deedful, 196. Despot dream, 527. Differences, 274. Dimpling, 149. Down the wind, 495. Dying house, 661.

Е

Eaves, 163. Ecliptic, 193. Edged with death, 595. Egalitics, 265. Eldest born, 484. 'Em, 188. Ever-murdor'd, 766.

F

Fain, 467, 805.
Fairy footings, 90.
,, palms, 91.
,, pines, 92
Fakter, 491.
Fescue, 530.
Feverous, 761.
Fiat, 26.

Finely, 75. Finials, S23. Five-beaded, 186. Fixt eyes, 832. Flamed, 409. Flattering, 145. Fling, 399. Flock, 361, 600. Flow'd and ebb'd, 218 Flowerage, 203. Flush, 459. Foam'd away his Reart, 342. Fold, 361. Foreran, 80. Forged, 96. Frail bark, 715. French Revolution, 265; 464, 760 etc. Frothfly, 530.

G

Ghastly sack, 764.
Gilly flowers, 159.
Glebe, 723.
Go-between, 523.
Golden hopes, 464.
Gorgeous heraldries, 656.
Greenish glimmerings, 622.
Grizzled, 8.
Grossly, 781.

н

Hamlet, 615.
Harrow'd, 607.
Hawk's cast, 849.
Heat of difference, 705.
Heaved shoulder, 466.
Hedgehog, 850.
Hedgerow texts, 171.
Holly-hocks, 164.
Home-circle, 504.

Ι

Ice-ferns, 222. Idioted, 590. Immemorial intimacy, 39, 136. In flood, 339, 633. Inch by inch, 967. Insipid, 28. Inverted scripture, An, 44. Irony, 121, 240, 463, 781

J

Jasmine, 157. Jilted, 353.

K

Kissing his vows, 472

L

Lancets, 622.
Landscape, 815.
Latinisms, 375, 537, 776, 818.
Lean heart, 526.
Light yoke, 708.
Lightning of the hour, 441.
Lintel, 331.
Living gold, 655.
Lodges, 145.
Long arms, 588.
Lowly-lovely, 168.
Lychgate, 824.

M

Magic cup, 142.
Magnetic, 625.
Make-believes, 95.
Make-believes, 95.
Malayan amuck, 463.
Manorial lord, 513.
Marestail, 92.
Martin-haunted, 163.
Martin's summer, 560.
Mastemof all, 132.
Meteor of a season, 205.
Middle-aisle, 818.
Midriff, 15.
Mildew'd, 383.

Milky-way, 160.
Millennial, 514.
Mine of memorics, 10.
Minion, 533.
Minuet, 207.
Mock sunshine, 609.
Mole, 849.
Moral of the poem, 1.
Music of the moon, 102.
Mystic star, 72.

7

Naked marriages, 765.
Narrow gloom, 840.
,, world, 774.
Nave, 812.
Nest in bloom, A, 150.
Niggard, 450.
Nightly, 490.
Northern Dreamer, 161.
Not proven, 53.

O

Of (= by), 167. Of the costlicst, 804. Ordeal by kindness, 561. Oxymorou, 515, 831.

þ

Pall, 827. Palmy well, 679. Parcel-bearded, 152. Parcell'd, 347. Parenthesis, 168. Parish wits, 521. Passes, 209. Passing thro' the fire, 671. Pensive beauty, 70. Pharaoh's darkness, 771. Pheasant lords, 381. Phosphorescence, 116. Pitted, 93, 256. Plantain, 850. Plight, 135. Pock-pitten, 256.

Poor in spirit, 754.
Poppy-mingled, 31.
Practise, 302.
Prayer-prelude, 628.
Precedent, 436.
Proven, 53, 182.
Proverb, 188.
Pyramidal, 20.

Q

Quintessence, 388.

R

Range of poofs, 47.
Rated, 378.
Red fruit, 762.
,, rose, 50.
Remorselessly, 799.
Repetition of a phrase, 428.
Repetition of a word, 487, 572, 661-2.
Retinue, 842.
Rhythm, 86, 168, 209, 441, 583, 585.
Rigid colour, 281.
Rival rose, 455.
Rotatory Thumbs, 169.
Ruled the hour, 194.
Run, 849.

D

Sacred, 426.
Sallowy, 147.
Sanguine, 64.
Saturate, 377.
Scarfskin, 660.
Scam'd, 814.
Seconded, 559.
Semi-jealousy, 189.
Shambles, 765.
Sheet-lightnings, 726.
Shook, 62, 216.
Shrill, 583.
Sick sea, 768.

Sicklier iteration, 299. Sleepy Land, A, 33. Slight, 238. Slow-worm, 852. Smatteringly, 433. . Soldier-like, 728. Sons of men, 44. ,, ,, the glebe, 723. Soul-smitten, 525. Sound-play, 487. Sow'd her name, 88. Spiritual doubt, 704. Stale devil, 290. Star of morning, 692. Stiffening, 273. Straight and fair, 676. Stumbling-blocks of scorn, 538. Summer-blanch'd, 152. burial, 164. shadow, 724.

T

Swang, 19.

Tabernacle, 618.
Telepathy, 578.
Temple-caten terms, 105.
Temted winter-field, The, 110
The (instrumental), 384.
Title scrolls, 656.
Touchwood, 514.
Traveller's joy, 152.
Treasure-trove, 515.
Trembling (trisyll.), 585.
Twitch, 732.
Two-footed, 126.

Ų

Unimpassion'd, 334. Unresisting, 801.

v

Vacant chairs, 720. Vanish'd race, 844. Vantage ground, 387. Vital spirits, 201. Violet, 845.

W

Waning red, 406.
Wanted, 841.
Warm, 260.
Warm-blue breathings, 155.
Wasted (= spont), 109.
Wealthy scabbard, 236.
Wear the garand, 112.
Weasel, 852.
Weathercock'd, 17

Widow'd walls, 720.

Wife-hunting, 212.

Wife-like, 808.
Wind-hover, 321.
Windy sign, 19.
Wheer, 490.
Wonan-markets, 348.
Wooldless, 471.
World's curse, 796.
Worn, 650.
Wounded peace, 52.
Writhing, 517.
Wavern, 17, 516.

Y

Yeomen, 497

MACMILLAN'S ENGLISH CLASSICS:

A SERIES OF SELECTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT ENGLISH WRITERS, WITH INTRODUCTION AND NOTES.

The following Volumes, Globe 8vo, are ready or in preparation.

ADDISON-SELECTIONS FROM THE SPECTATOR. By K. DEIGHTON. 2s. 6d.

ADDISON AND STEELE—COVERLEY PAPERS FROM THE SPECTATOR.

Edited by K. Deightton. 1s. 9d.

ARNOLD—Selections. By G. C. MACAULAY. 2s. 6d.

BACON—ESSAYS. By F. G. Selby, M.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

The Schoolmaster—"A handy and serviceable edition of a famous English classical work, one that can lever lossests freshness and its truth."

THE ADVANCEMENT OF LEARNING. By F. G. SELBY, M.A. Book I., 2s.; Book II., 4s. 6d.

BUNYAN—THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS. Edited by John Morrison, M.A. 1s. 9d.; sewed, 1s. 6d.

BURKE-REFLECTIONS ON THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By F. G.

SELBY, M. A. 5s.

Selby, M. A. 5s.

Selsman—"Contains many notes which will make the book valuable beyond the circle to which it is immediately addressed."

Schoolmaster—"A very good book whether for examination or for independent reading and study."

Clasgue Herati—"The book is remarkably well edited."

-Speeches on American Taxation; on Conciliation with AMBRICA; LETTER TO THE SHERIFFS OF BRISTOL.

F. G. SELBY, M.A. 3s. 6d. BYRON-CHILDE HAROLD.

Edited by EDWARD E. MORRIS. In the Press. CAMPBELL-SELECTIONS. By W. T. WEBB, M.A. [In the Press. CHAUCER-SELECTIONS FROM CANTERBURY TALES. By H. CORSON. 4s. 6d.

CHOSEN ENGLISH-Selections from Wordsworth, Byron, Shelley, Lamb, and Scott. With short biographies and notes by A. ELLIS, B.A. 2s. 6d.

COWPER-THE TASK, BOOK IV. By W. T. WEBB, M.A. Sewed, 1s. —LETTERS, SELECTIONS FROM. By W. T. WEBB, M.A. 2s. 6d. —SHORTER POEMS. Edited by W. T. WEBB, M.A. 2s. 6d.

DRYDEN-SELECT SATIRES-ABSALOM AND ACHITOPHEL; THE MEDAL: MAC FLECKNOE. By J. CHURTON COLLINS, M.A. 1s. 9d.

GOLDSMITH-THE TRAVELLER and THE DESERTED VILLAGE. By ARTHUR BARRETT, B.A. 1s. 9d. THE TRAVELLER (separately), sewed, 1s. THE DESERTED VILLAGE (separately), sewed, 1s.

-VICAR OF WAKEFIELD. By MICHAEL MACMILLAN, B. 4. 2s. 6d. The Scotsman—"It has a short critical and biographical introduction, and a very full series of capital notes."

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED, LONDON,

GRAY—POEMS. By JOHN BRADSHAV, LL.D. 1s. 9d.

Dublin Itening Mail—"The Introduction and Notes are all that can be desired. We believe that this will rightly become the standard school and the production of the standard school." edition of Gray

Schoolmaster_"One of the best school editions of Gray s poems we have seen

HELPS-ENAYS WAITIFN IN THE INTERVALS OF BUSINESS.

By F. J. ROWE, M.A., 2nd W. T. WEBE, M.A. 1s. 9d.

The Limbert World- 'Phese essays tre, indeed, too good to be forgotten'
The Candidate-"A will nome addition to our school classics. The introduction, though brief, is full of point'

JOHNSON LIFF OF MILION. BY K. DEIGHTON.
-LIFL OF DRADIN BY P. PITERSON. ls 9d.

[In the Press. -Lie of Popk By P. Peterson In the Press.

LAMB-IIIE Esquis of Elia. First Series Edited by N. L. Haliward, M.A., and S. C. Hill, B.A. 3s; æw∉d,•2s 6d.

LONGFELLOW-Courthip of Miles Standish. By W. Elitot,

Edited by W. T. WEBB, MACAULAY-LAYS OF ANCH NI ROMF

--ESSAY ON ADDISON By J. W. Halis, M. A. [In the Piers, --ESSAY ON WARREN HASTINGS Ed by K. Deighton. 28 6d In the Piers.

-Lord Clivi Edited by K. Dlighton.

-Essay on Boswill's Life of Johnson. Edited by R. F. WINCH, M A. 28 6d.

MALORY MORTL D'ARTHUR. Edited by A. T. MARIN, M A. 25. 6d

MILTON PARADISI LOST, BOOKS I and II By MICHAEL MAC-MILLAN, bA 1s. 9d Books I.-IV. separately, 1s 3d. each; sewed, ls each

The Times of India "The notes of course occupy the editor's thief atten tion, and form the most valuable furt of the volume. They are cle &, concise, and to the point, while at the same time they are simile enough for the comprehension of students to whom Milton without annotation must needs be a mystery."

The schoolmaster—"The volume is admirably sdapted for use in upper classes of kinglish Schools

The Mucaturnal Acus - For higher classes there can be no better book for reading, an ily us, and grammur, and the issue of these books of Paradise
Lost must be required as a great inducement to teachers to introduce higher literature into their classes."

-L'AILIGEO, IL PENSEROSO, LYCIDAS, ARCADES, SONNETS, &c.

By WILLIAM BELL, M.A. 1s. 9d.

The Glasgow Herald-"A careful study of this book will be as educative as that of any of our best critics on Aeschylus of Sophocles" -Conus. By the same. 1s 3d.; sewed, 1s.

The Dublin hiering Mail—"The introduction is well done, and contains much sound criticism"

The Practical Icacher - "The notes findude everything a student could reasonably desire in the way of the clucidations of the text, and at the reasonably desire in the way of the enucleatable of the Gallar and distinct a fashion, that they are likely to attract the reador instead of repoling him.

—SABISON AGONISTES. By H. M. PERCUYAL, M.A. 2s.

The Guardian—" His notes are always of real literary value..... His intro-

15 94

- PALGRAVE GOLDEN TRESURY OF SONGS AND LYRICS. Book Second? By W. BELL, M.A. 3s. 6d.
- A Selection of English Patriotic Poetry, POEMS OF ENGLAND. with notes by HFREFORD B. GEORGE, M.A., and ARTHUR Sidgwick, M.A. 2s. 6d.
- POPE—ESSAY ON MAN. Epistles I.-IV. Edited by EDWORD-E. Morris, M.A. 1s. 9d.
- Edited by J. C. Collins, M.A. 1s. 9d. -ESSAY ON CRITICISM.
- SCOTT-THE LADY OF THE LAKE. . By G. H. STUART, M.A. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s. Canto I., sewed, 9d.
- -THE LAY OF THE LAST MINSTREL. By G. H. STUART, M. A., and E. H. ELLIOT, B. A. 2s. Canto I., sewed, 9d. Cantos I.-III., and IV.-VI., 1s. 3d. each; sewed, 1s. each.
  The Journal of Education—"The text is well printed, and the notes, wherever we have tested them, have proved at once scholarly and simple."

- -Marmion. By Michael Macmillam, B.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.
- The Spectate . . . His introduction is admirable, alle for point and brevity."

The Indian Daily News-"The present volume contains the poem in 200 pages, with more than 100 pages of notes, which seem to meet every possible difficulty."

By the same. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d. -Rokeby.

The Guardian-"The introduction is excellent, and the notes show much care and research."

SHAKESPEARE—THE TEMPEST. By K. DEIGHTON. 1s. 9d.

The Guardian—"Speaking generally of Macmillan's Series we may say that they approach more nearly than any offer edition we know to the ideal school Shabespeare. The introductors emarks are not too much burdened with controversial matter; the notes are abundant and to the point, scarcely any difficulty being passed over without some explanation, either by a paraphrase or by etymological and grammatical notes."

-Much Ado About Nothing. By the same. 28.

The Schoolmaster-" The notes on words and phrases are full and clear."

- -A MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM. By the paine. Is. 9d.
- -THE MERCHANT OF VENICE. By the same.
- -As You LIKE IT. By the same. 1s. 9d.
- -Twelfth Night. By the same. 1s. 9d.
- . The Educational News-"This is an excellent edition of a good play."
- -THE WINTER'S TALE. By the same.
- -King John. By the same. 1s. 9d.
- -RICHARD II. By the same. ls. 9d.
- -HENRY IV., Part L. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.
- HENRY IV., Part II. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.
- -HENRY V. By the same. els. 9d.
- -RICHARD III. By C. H. TAWNEY, M.A. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s. The School Guardian—"Of Mr. Tawney's work as an annotabr we can speak in terms of commendation. His notes are full and always to the point."
- -HENRY VIII. By K. DEIGHTON. 1s. 9d.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED LONDON.

SEASTRANE - COMORANOS. By K. DEIGHTON, 2s. 6d.; sewed. 2s. MONRO AND JULIET. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s. SULTUS CARRAR. By the same. 1s. 9d. -Magners. By the same. 1s. 9d. The Successoral Review. "This is an excellent edition for the student. The notes of uggestive, . . and the vivid character sketches of Macheth and Ledy Macheth are excellent."

EASTER. By the same. 2s. 6d. sewed, 2s.

KING LEAR. By the same. 1s. 9d. -OTHELLO. By the same. 2s. -ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. By the same 2s 6d; sewed, 2s. ... CYMBELINE. By the same. 2s. 6d : sewed. 2s The Steteman—"Mr Desphion has adapted his commentary," both in whallo and in Cymbelne with great skill to the requirements and capacities of the readers to whom the series is addressed." SOUTHEY-LIVE OF NELSON. By MICHAEL MACMILLAN, BA. 3s.; Tewed, 2s. 6d. Book 1 By H M PERCIVAL, SPESSER THE FARRIE QUIENE M.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d. THE SHEPHEARD'S CALENDER. By C H. HERFORD, Litt D. 24. 6d. STALL SELECTIONS. By L. E. STEFIE, M.A. 2s. FATSON-SELECTIONS. By F. J ROWE, M.A., and W. T. WEBB, M.A. 3s. 6d. Also in two Parts, 2s. 6d. each. Part I. Recollections of the Arabian Nights, The Lady of Shalott, The Lotos-Exters, Dora, Ulysses, Tithonus, The Lord of Burleigh, The Prook, Ode on the Deat of the Duke of Wellington, The Revenge,—Part II Ocnone, The Palace of Art, A Dieam of Fair Women, Morte d'Arthur, Sir Galahad, The Voyage, and Demeter and Persephone.

The Journal of Education—"It should find a wide circulation in Shaffash schools. The notes give just the requisite amount o halp for understanding only some paylamatic as of the allusions with which his permanent, and illustrate may be means of parallel passages. A short critical insolubiling gives the salient fustures of his style with apt examples!

The Literary World—"The book is very complete, and will-no a good diffractuation to the study of Tannyson's works generally!

World—"Reverse n'Appure" By the same Sawed is -MORTE D'ARTHUR. By the same. Sewed, is THE COMING OF ARTHUR; THE PASSING OF ARTHUR. By. F. J. Rows, M.A. 2s. 6d. THE PRINCESS BY P. M. WALLACE, M.A. 2s. 6d.

THE PRINCESS BY P. M. WALLACE, M.A. 3s. 6d. GARREN AND LYNETTE. By G. C. MACAULAY, M.A. 2s. 6d. The Marriage of Geratht; Geraint and Enid. By G. C. Maraulay, M.A. 2s. 6d. Day Holy Grain. By G. C. Maraulay, M.A. 2s. 6d. Day Holy Grain. By G. C. Maraulay, M.A. 2s. 6d. S. C. Maraulay, M.A. 2s. 6d. The Banks, Le. St., tack. THE OF MEMOTER LONDON.